JACKSON TELLS L PLANS TO REDUCE 10-CENT FARE

PRESIDENT SUSTAINED IN HOUSE VOTE

Motion to Override Daylight Veto Fails, the Vote Being 247 to 135

By International News Service.

Washington, July 14.—The House this afternoon refused to override President Wilson's veto of the daylight saving law. The vote was 247 in favor of overriding to 135 in favor of sustaining the veto.

As a two-thirds vote was necessary, it would have required 254 votes to pass the measure over the President's disapproval.

ACTION POSTPONED ON WEBSTER-JORDAN CASE

Official action by the assessors in connection with reassessing property owned or controlled by the Webster-Jordan Company in the Back Bay has been postponed until Mayor Peters returns from his vacation. This statement was given out following a conference at noon between acting Mayor Ford and Edward T. Kelly, chairman of the assessors.

The property in question is located at No. 212 Huntington avenue, and is one of many apartments where tenants received notice that complaints to the health department would mean notice to vacate. This particular piece of property is owned by James H. Beals and is assessed for $30,000. The tenants have been notified of an increase of 25 per cent. in rent.

POST OF BOSTON POLICE IN AMERICAN LEGION

A post of the American Legion, numbering 177 members, has been formed by members of the Boston Police Department who served in the great war. The post has been named in honor of a Patrolman John J. O'Connell, the only Boston policeman to give his life to the cause. O'Connell, an ensign in the navy, succumbed to influenza while on duty in foreign waters. John F. McInnes of Station 2 has been elected commander of the post. The other officers are: Edward J. Kelly, Station 16, vice-commander; William J. Flynn, Station 3, adjutant; Francis E. Durgin, Station 16, financial officer, and John R. King, Station 2, historian.

ARMY DENIES CRUELTY TO SOLDIERS ABROAD

Washington, July 14.—Statements made to Representatives in Congress that American soldiers were beaten and clubbed and badly treated in their prisons, as were soldiers at Andersonville in the Civil War, are discredited by War Department officials.

Several officers who have lately come from Europe declared they never heard of inhuman treatment, and that such acts would be impossible under General Hart, who is in charge of the military district of Paris.

It is very likely that a report will be asked from General Hart by Congress on specific allegations of cruelty and inhumanity.

Fifi Widener Is Back in Newport Colony

Heiress Is Heart Whole and Fancy Free, Despite Her Reported "Exile" at Lenox.

Her return to society having silenced the gossips, Miss Widener, shown above, enjoys herself at Newport. Photo by the International Film Service.

Newport, July 14.—The return of the vivacious little Miss Fifi Widener to the society colony here, apparently heart whole and fancy free, has dispelled the gossip that her recent mysterious sojourn in the Berkshires was dictated by her parents in an effort to thwart her marriage to a Philadelphia admirer.

Miss Widener, who is heiress to the millions of Joseph E. Widener, the Philadelphia traction magnate, is not yet seventeen, but the report that she was about to give her heart to a brother Philadelphian with whom she became friendly at Palm Beach, found ready credence even among her friends.

Suspicion that Miss Fifi had fallen in love became almost conviction when it was reported from Lenox, Mass., that the Widener heiress was in virtual "exile" there. Report had it that two lynx-eyed individuals, who hovered near her at all times, were detectives employed by her parents to circumvent any marriage plan Miss Widener might have in mind. Later she was joined by her mother, and the reports that she had contemplated matrimony against her parents' wishes were denied.

Now Miss Fifi is back at Newport, and if there is "anybody," he hasn't put in an appearance. So Newport has set back easily in its chair again, while Miss Widener and the girls of her set while away as best they may, the tedious days that must come and go before the Prince of Walse arrives on his much-heralded visit.

HARBOR TIEUP AT MIDNIGHT PREDICTED

Shipping of all kinds in Boston harbor will be almost completely tied up at midnight, according to labor union officials, unless the United States Shipping Board and the private ship owners meet the demands of the crews before that time.

Already three ships are tied up in the harbor because the crews, anticipating the strike order, refuse to sail so late and be at sea when the strike begins.

The Eastern Stemship Association and the Nantasket Beach steamboat lines are the sole major exceptions to expected strike. Both these concerns have recently made concessions to their employes.

The concession of a ten per cent. wage increase, offered by the United States Shipping Board, has not at all satisfied the crews, who refuse to consider any settlement which does not include not only recognition of the union, but the closed shop. The ship owners maintain that while steamships on short runs can afford to operate only union crews, crews which go to sea for a long time must occasionally be increased by non-union recruits.

The ships already held in port in anticipation of the strike are the City of Montgomery and the City of Rome of the Savannah Line, and the Chippewa of the Clyde Line, just in from Jacksonville. Crews of all three craft refused to sail until the strike is settled.

HENRY FORD ON STAND IN $1,000,000 SUIT

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 14.—Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer and [illegible] in the $1,000,000 suit against the Chicago Tribune, took the witness stand in court here today just before the noon recess.

Ford succeeded his son, Edsel, on the stand, the younger Ford giving testimony today concerning the war profits and contracts of the Ford Motor Company.

STRIKE STOPS FISH SUPPLY

'FISHLESS DAYS' ARE AT HAND

300 Handlers Employed at South Boston Pier Join in Walkout

Fishless days for Boston are practically at hand, following the strike today of 300 fish handlers employed by wholesale dealers of the South Boston Fish Pier. Their action was the result of a strike vote taken at a meeting on Sunday, in sympathy with the union fishermen.

This makes it very difficult to handle fresh fish even if it were arriving in any appreciable quantities, or to take it from cold storage. Not a single vessel arrived at the Fish Pier today with groundfish, although Monday is usually the busiest day of the week, with arrivals totalling one to two million pounds.

It was announced that a conference would be called between officials of the Teamsters' Union and the Fishermen's Union of the Atlantic at which the teamsters would be aksd to refuse to haul any fish brought in by non-union men.

The only arrivals today were a few boxes and barrels of fish in vessels from Yarmouth, N. S., Bangor Me., and elsewhere. This, totaling only a few thousand pounds, was scarcely a drop in the bucket of Boston's usual Monday receipts. Three swordfishermen brought 221 large fish, and the price was twenty-six cents ex-vessel, a drop of one-half cent from last week. The crews of these vessels were not expected to go out again.

Sicilian fishermen comprising what is known as the "mosquito fleet," small motor boats that fish mostly between Nahant and Plymouth, today signified their intention of ceasing work until the strike had been settled. These men are not union members, but are in sympathy with the demands of the latter. The fish brought in by the "mosquito fleet" is generally regarded as the best and freshest that comes to the Boston market, and supplies the first-class hotels.

In retail markets downtown there was a noticeable scarcity of fish. The largest concern of the sort in Boston, located in Dock square, had only a small amount of halibut, swordfish, tinker mackerel, salmon and codfish left over from Saturday.

GOV. PROUTY'S WIDOW LOSES DAMAGE SUIT

Newport, Vt., July 14.—After being out nine hours, the jury in the case of Mrs. George R. Prouty, widow of former Governor Prouty, who sued the Grand Trunk Railway for damages for her husband's death, returned a verdict in favor of the railroad.

The former Governor was killed when his auto was struck by a train at Waterville, August 19, 1918. Mrs. Prouty sued for $300,000. The jury declined to allow damages even for injuries to the chauffeur or the destruction of the automobile.

DISPUTE HOLDS UP MAIL

Between 250 and 500 Sacks at North Station; Due to Disagreement

From 250 to 500 sacks of mail, destined for various parts of New England, were today lying at the North Station, where they were deposited Saturday and Sunday as a result of a controversy between railroad and postoffice officials.

The American was informed that this controversy has been going on since shortly after the signing of the armistice, but has only recently come to a head.

According to the American's information, it has been customary in the past for the postoffice officials to deliver mail from the North postal station on both sides of the North Station.

In this way the railroad men were able to handle the mail and get it aboard trains without interfering with the passenger traffic through the terminal. Part of the sacks were delivered to the inward baggage platform on the Nassau street side of the terminal and part at the outward platform on the other side.

Recently, according to the American's information, the postoffice men have objected strenuously to doing this. On Saturday the climax came when, it is said, they deposited all the mail for northern New England on the Nassau street side and positively refused to split it.

It is understood that the railroad men were told that both were working for the government and that the mailmen saw no reason why they should make any more work for themselves than necessary.

The postal station is just across the street from the North Station. The railroad men, in consequence refused on their part to handle the mail at all, and there the matter rests.

WOMAN SENTENCED AS "RAILER AND BRAWLER"

Mrs. Mary Fortier of Centre street, Dorchester, today in the Dorchester Court, was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction by Judge Joseph R. Churchill. Complaint was made by Mrs. Mary A. McManus of No. 55 Centre street, Dorchester, that Mrs. Fortier was a "railer and brawler." Mrs. McManus was supported by seven witnesses, who testified that the defendent used abusive language and otherwise made life unbearable for them. Mrs. Fortier appealed and was held in $200 personal recognizance.

AMERICAN LEGION WILL OBSERVE ARMISTICE DAY

New York, July 14.—The first anniversary of Armistice Day is to be celebrated nationally by the American Legion, it was announced at the Legion's headquarters. The American Legion, which is the national organization of the American veterans of the world war, is perfecting plans to have November 11 devoted to meetings, parades and patriotic demonstrations by State organizations and local posts throughout the United States.

Doctors in a 'Duel to Death' With Germs

A "duel to the death with germs" will be fought between two physicians, one of them a former Boston man, as the result of a challenge, the survivor to be honorary pallbearer at the other's funeral.

The challenger is Dr. H. A. Zettel electropath, of St. Paul Minn., and the challenged, Dr. H. A. Hill, executive officer of the Minnesota Public Health Association, and a bacteriologist in Boston from 1898 to 1905. Dr. Hill has accepted the gauntlet, and the fight will be on shortly.

The scientific challenge revives dueling in a form with which the law cannot interfere. The two are to expose themselves to the most virulent of contagious diseases, including typoid, smallpox and bubonic plague. Dr. Zettel, the challenger, will use as his only defence against the germs, pure air, sanitary food and drink. Dr. Hill will first be inoculated. The two will expose themselves simulanteously, and then go into quarantine to await results.

DO GERMS CAUSE DISEASE?

This singular duel, which has stirred scientific circles, grew out of an article written by Dr. J. B. Fraser of Toronto, entitled "Do Germs Cause Disease?" and published in the Physical Culture Magazine. The writer issued a similar challenge, and Dr Zettel, who holds to Dr. Fraser's theories, offered himself in the lat-

MOVE TO RAISE CARFARE ON RAILROADS

Federal Railroad Director and Public Service Men in Conference

Increased commutation passenger fares to suburbs on the three railroads out of Boston were forecasted today as the result of a conference at the State House between members of the State Public Service Commission, Max Thelen director of public service for the Federal railroad administration and representatives of the passenger agents of the railroads.

The conference was requested by Mr Thelen by telegraph. It was pointed out by the representatives of the railroad passenger agents that the railroad commutation rates to the suburbs were lower now than the rates to the same points by street railway. It was also stated that the increased travel on the railroads to Boston suburbs since the advent of the ten-cent fare on the Boston Elevated had been so great as to give the railroad administration a big problem to handle.

Persons who advocate government ownership of railroads freely discussed the action of the director of public service in calling the conference before the railroads requested it. No time was lost in getting the machinery in action for an increase in fares, as only five days have elapsed since the Elevated increased its fare to ten cents, with the subsequent boycott.

Thousands of commuters have turned to the railroads since the Elevated increased its fare.

GERMAN ALIEN ENEMY HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Kertt E. Schenderlein, German alien enemy, who was arrested in Portsmouth and fined $50 for carrying a concealed weapon, was today held in $8,000 for the Grand Jury by Judge Murray on charges of forging, uttering and larceny. It is understood the Federal authorities will take charge of the man when the local courts finish with him. Schenderlein is charged with larceny of two checks for $1,450 each from the Burmus Paper Company of West Dudley. It is claimed he forged an indorsement on these and deposited them at the Exchange Trust Company, later drawing out $2,700.

MOVE TO REVOKE JITNEY LICENSES IN QUINCY

Acting Chief of Police Goodhue of Quincy, having lodged a complaint with the Mayor against several jitney drivers whom he charges with speeding and with overcrowding their cars, the Mayor will ask the City Council to revoke the licenses of these drivers.

REVERE POLICE TRAP 9 IN GAMING RAIDS

Nine Revere young men will appear in Chelsea District Court charged with gaming as the result of two raids conducted by the Revere police. Sergeant Shannahan was in charge of the squad that conducted the raids, and said the men were shooting craps.

One of the raids was at No. 78 Centennial avenue and the other was on North Shore road, the police refusing to give the number. The men gave their names as Morry Cohen, Nathan Branhan, William Bolin, David Bolin, Benjamin Cohen, Albert Dolan, Harry Greenberg, John Tower and Benjamin Blood.

DECLARES FOR ZONE SYSTEM

Chairman of Trustees Would Cut Payroll and Abolish Subway Rentals

Boston Elevated patrons can look forward to a reduction of the ten-cent fare soon, said Chairman James F. Jackson of the public board of trustees today to the American.

Here are Mr. Jacksons plans for reducing fares:

The adoption of the zone system, so that if a patron rides a mile he pays carfare for a mile, not the fare of his fellow citizen, who may ride ten miles to and from business.

The abolishment of subway rentals, saving the Elevated a yearly expense of approximately $1,500,000 a year.

Paring down to bed rock the payroll of the road. It has been charged recently that the payrolls were padded by "heelers" of politicians.

Chairman Jackson said that service on the Elevated will depend on patronage. If a line is boycotted to a large extent the service will be cut accordingly, he declared. The trustees do not propose to operate lines regardless of patronage.

"I went to my Summer home for a few days' rest because I am suffering from neuralgia," said Mr. Jackson. "I did not go away form Boston to escape the talk about the ten-cent fare. I am pretty well known in Boston, and anyone who wants to think that way may do so.

"We plan to go through the Elevated organization with a fine-tooth comb, and weed out every unnecessary employe.

"If there are any employes in the road who secured their positions through political friends and are not

STRENGTH OF ARMY REDUCED 10 PER CENT.

Washington, July 14.—The strength of the American army is only 24 per cent. of what it was on armistice day, November 11, the War Department announced today.

HONOR ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST MARNE BATTLE

In honor of the heroes who fell in the first battle of the Marne, Acting Mayor Francis J. W. Ford today issued an order calling for all flags to be flown at half staff Friday, the third anniversary of the conflict. Special services in St. Paul's Cathedral will be held. The military detail will be in charge of Major Hudson Hannigan.

HOLD HARTFORD WAITER ON CHARGE OF THEFT

George Handell, a waiter, twenty-four, of Hartford, Ct., was arraigned in the Chelsea court today charged with attempt to commit larceny from an unknown person. The case was continued till July 21. According to Police Sergeant Murray, Handell, in his sight, put his hand into the pocket of an unknown man. He then arrested him. The police are investigating Handell's record in Hartfo

MILLIONS CHEER "PERSHING'S OWN" BATTALION IN PARIS STREETS

20,000 ALLIED TROOPS MARCH IN PARIS VICTORY PARADE

By ROBERT J. PREW.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Paris, July 14—Twenty thousand allied soldiers swung across Paris eastward today before the eyes of more than a million spectators who saw the great Victory parade.

Leading them on horseback was Marshal Foch, generalissimo and directing genius of the Allied success on the field of battle. Beside him rode Marshal Joffre, hero of the first great battle of the Marne, and marching at the head of various contingents came Generals Pershing, Haig, Petain, Diaz, Castelnau and other great chiefs.

The troops marched in alphabetical order which brought the Americans led by General Pershing immediately behind Foch and Joffre.

For two hours they swung through a double living wall four miles long with the cheers rising in one unending roar.

STAIN OF '70 WIPED OUT.

The greatest moment of the day came when Foch and Joffre drove their horses under the magnificent Arc de Triomphe, followed by the soldiers of liberty. Since France's defeat in 1870, the arch of the finest architectural monument to Napoleon's victories had been barred to wheeled traffic by heavy swinging chains. In previous celebrations since the armistice, Kings and Princes had all passed around the arch.

But today the stain of 1870 was wiped out. The chains were flung down and the victorious allied troops marched triumphantly beneath the towering structure while a solid mass of people filling the stands around the Place de l'Etoile broke into storms of cheering.

It is impossible to estimate the number of people along the line of march but Paris papers today said that several millions saw or tried to see the spectacle. Representatives of nearly every civilized people cheered themselves hoarse at the passing war heroes. A riot of overpowering emotion attended the scene, in which full-throated French applause was the predominant note.

GRIEF BEHIND CHEERS.

But in the unprecedentedly great mass of people lining the route and packing the overlooking windows and balconies there were many moving manifestations of the most bitter grief.

From these windows bereaved parents and children wept at the thought that a kindlier fate would have allowed their kin to share in this [illegible] and not, as Clemenceau recently said in the Chamber of Deputies "have laid them down in an aureole of glory on the field of battle."

But the grandeur of the scene was almost overshadowing, the most wonderful demonstration of rejoicing ever seen in the French capital. Today it is as though the peoples of the earth were united in welcoming a millennium.

What in fact is happening in Paris today is that the greatest men of Europe are joining the humblest in a [illegible] apotheosis of peace.

TRIBUTE TO HEROIC DEAD.

Before the triumph began today, France paid an official tribute to her more than a million and a half of dead in the most mournful ceremony in the history of the republic. A "death vigil" took place beneath the Arc de Triomphe where a huge tomb of [illegible] was built on a raised platform, sprinkled with the soil of many battlefields.

A mammoth plaster figure of victory stood at each of the four corners. All night a picket of honor stood watch with arms reversed while a multitude of people, thousands weeping, filed beneath the arch before the sepulchral monument in silent homage to the fallen heroes. The candelabras were lighted at nightfall and cast flickering streams of light upon the people streaming solemnly past the tomb into the surrounding gloom of the vast arch.

Early this morning the sepulchre was removed to a corner of the Place de l'Etoile to allow the troops to march beneath the arch.

The route of march from the Porte Maillot to the Place de la Republique was a scene of Babylonian splendor. At Porte Maillot, through which the Allied armies made their official entry into the city, stood a great triumphal arch.

Along the Avenue de la Grande Armee and then along the Champs Elysees to the Place de la Concorde were festoons of gilded bunting, which swung from Venetian masts placed at thirty foot intervals. Adorning the masts were luminous globes, flower baskets, clusters of Allied flags and the coat of arms of French cities.

Displayed on pyramidical columns at frequent intervals were trophies of war, the steel helmets, rifles, haversacks and grenades mingled with garlands of flowers, the whole war like display in each instance surmounted by a Gallic cock, emblem of French military valor.

The Arc de Triomphe stood undraped in all its splendor amidst a riot of flags and surrounded by a mammoth grandstand on the Place de l'Etoile.

That section of the route from the Arc de Triomphe down the Avenue des Champs Elysees to the Place de la Concorde was officially styled "Triumphal Way," and here the biggest decorative effect was accomplished.

Midway, on the spacious Rond Point des Champs Elysees bas reliefs were erected on altars dedicated to the martyred cities of Verdun, Rheims, Soissons and Arras. Throughout the day clouds of vapor, pumped up by electricity, flowed out from votive urns crowning these altars.

Here by special wish of Premier Clemenceau captured German relics heaped up pell mell with the figure of a victorious Gaelic cock perched above each heap.

Another plaster triumphal arch stood on the Place de la Concorde at the entrance to the Tuilleries Gardens. It bore on its entablature the words: "To Our Glorious Armies," while upon the columns were inscribed the names of prominent generals.

DECORATIONS CRITICIZED.

The whole length of the Avenue des Champs Elysees was a row of stands. Other giant stands were erected on the terrace of the Tuilleries Gardens and around the Place de la Concorde.

Here the official decorative scheme ended, but the remainder of the route up the Rue Royale and along the Grand Boulevards to the Place de la Republique, through private initiation, provided a record display of flags, banners, oriflammes and escutcheons.

Brilliant though the scene was, there was a general complaint that the decorations, which were carried out mainly by the art of war artists, lacked the magnitude fitting such an historic occasion.

The government appropriated something less than a million dollars for the occasion and this, added to the fact that only a fortnight was given to devise and carry out the scheme, displeased many critics.

Paris was jammed to overflowing by great crowds of visitors that poured in from all over France. Hundreds of thousands spent the night without sleep and by daybreak the streets were teeming with people hurrying to the line of march. Every good place was occupied soon after dawn when the troops began to rendezvous in the Bois de Boulogne.

MINOR SUES FOR $20,000 IN AUTO INJURY CASE

Charles J. Griesbach and John J. Griesbach of Cambridge have each been sued for $10,000 by Irving G. McCormack of Cambridge, a minor, who sues through his father, Daniel McCormack. He alleges that he was injured by an automobile owned by the defendants.

Wilson Sends Bastile Day Greetings to France

Washington, July 14.—President Wilson today sent the following mssage of greeting to President Poincare of France of France on the occasion of Bastile day:

"May I not on this day, which commemorates the breaking of the chains which once bound France to an intolerable servitude, convey to the people of France the cordial fraternal greetings of the people of the United States and their sense of privilege and joy in having been associated with France in breaking the bonds o fthe world.

"WOODROW WILSON."

DAILY MAIL HINTS CARSON IS A BOLSHEVIST

Northcliffe Paper Asserts Government Should Deal With Him

By International News Service.

London, July 14—Significance was attached in political circles today to the fact that the Chronicle, the organ of Premier Lloyd George, the Telegraph and the Morning Post made no editorial comment upon the speech of Sir Edward Carson on Saturday demanding the repeal of the home rule for Ireland bill and warning Americans not to interfere in Irish affairs.

The Daily Mail, Lord Northcliffe's paper, which has been criticising the Premier, said, under the caption, "Carson's Bolshevism":

"Is there one law for Robert Smillie (head of the coal miners' union) and another for Sir Edward Carson? A. Bonar Law, government leader in Commons, declared that the government would use all the resources of the State against dictation by the miners and the railway workers. The government would make the path easier if it let it be known that it intends to deal firmly with the Bolshevism of ex-ministers as well as of labor agitators."

The Times, another Northcliffe paper, declared that Sir Edward was responsible for the Easter rising at Dublin in 1916, but that he possibly did not foresee that at the time.

"But he has no such excuse today," continued the Times, "when he condemns the rebellion of 1916 he should remember that he is the last man in Great Britain with less right to do so, and when he tells America to mind her own business he courts the retort that the wishes of 15,000,000 Irish-Americans are part of her (Ireland's) business. There is no room for dictatorships in a commonwealth of free democracies—neither dictatorship of the proletariat nor the Orangemen."

The Daily News thinks "there is no room in a civilized community for people who are prepared on the least occasion to destroy one another in a private quarrel."

ARGONNE FOREST FOX ESCAPES, BUT IS RETAKEN

A live fox, born in the Argonne Forest, was what Patrolman Charles Maynes of the Field Corner police station took into custody today after a hot chase from Welles avenue, Dorchester to Roslyn street. The animal, which was not identified as a fox until the police authorities had eliminated all dog theories, was left in the care of Scholley Lake of No. 1881 Dorchester avenue by a relative lately discharged from the army. The fox was returned to Scholley.

INDORSES LODGE DEMAND FOR JAP TREATY

Foreign Relations Committee Reports Resolution Calling on Wilson for Text

By J. BART CAMPBELL.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, July 14—Three separate resolutions indirectly involving the peace treaty were reported to the Senate this afternoon by the Senate foreign relations committee.

Beyond taking up certain preliminaries connected with the peace treaty, the committee adjourned without considering the document itself, or the proposed appearance of President Wilson before the committee. The resolutions reported were:

First—The Lodge measure, requesting the President to furnish the Senate with a copy of any treaty purported to have been "Projected between Germany and Japan," together with any information regarding it which may be in the possession of the State Department. An amendment to this measure reading: "Or any further information concerning any negotiations between Germany and Japan during the war," was adopted in committee by a vote of 13 to 2.

Second—The Borah resolution, calling upon the President for the production of a protest against the cession of Shantung to Japan, which Secretary Lansing, General Bliss and Henry White, three of the American peace commissioners at Paris, were reported to have signed before the peace conference ended.

Third—The Lafollette resolution requesting the President to inform the Senate why Nicaragua "has been permitted to invade Costa Rica," and "for what reason Costa Rica, a belligerent with the allies in the war, was not permitted to sign the Versailles treaty."

Describing the League of Nations as the "world's great charter of peace," which would "survive the vicious attack of new prophets of evil," Senator Swanson, Democrat, of Virginia, member of the Foreign Relations Committee, presented in a "keynote" address in the Senate this afternoon a series of arguments in support of those provisions of the league covenant.

"No nation surrenders its sovereignty by becoming a member of the league. None of the members of the league subscribes to undertakings which impairs its sovereignty," declared Swanson.

"That the United States for example reserve its full sovereignty when entering the league is further emphasized and conclusively settled by the provision of the covenant allowing any member, upon giving two years' notice of its intention, to withdraw from the league," Swanson continued.

SENATOR CURRAN AIDS SOLDIERS' BONUS WORK

Senator George E. Curran has announced that in aid of the soldiers' bonus he will have a force of clerks at his home, No. 5 Auburn street, Roxbury, ready to give all information and furnish free the services of a justice of the peace to all service men who require it. This opportunity will be available tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, between 5 and 8 p. m.

12 DAYS ON FARM FOR TENEMENT HOUSE GIRLS

At the Winning Farm, off Lowell street, Lexington, were welcomed today the second group of two dozen girls from the tenement district of Boston. The girls were greeted by the matron, Miss Elizabeth Bunker of Auburn, Me. The children will spend twelve days at the farm, as guests of the South End House of Boston.

Former Kaiser Happy and Apparently in Good Health

By AMBROSE LAMBERT.

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service and the London Daily Express.

Amerongen, Holland, July 14—William Hohenzollern, ex-Kaiser, is not the broken man he has been pictured, nor is he apparently worrying over the prospect of facing trial for war crimes, according to his appearance.

The correspondent had an extremely close view of him and the former empress and a secretary while they were walking the grounds of the castle of Count Bentinck. The one time emperor was laughing gaily, talking animatedly and swinging his cane, just as he did in pre-war days, as I crossed the bridge over the castle moat.

William was dressed in brown tweeds and his figure was strikingly erect though rather stout.

There was no sign that he had been bowed down by the weight of his woes.

R-34 READY FOR FINAL FLIGHT TO ITS BASE

Dirigible Is Overhauled at Pulham for Trip to East Fortune

By International News Service.

Pulham, England, July 14.—A force of 200 workmen were today engaged in overhauling the British dirigible R-34 in preparation for her flight to her base at East Fortune, Scotland, the starting point of her trans-Atlantic voyage.

She is expected to take the air within two or three days and make the trip to East Fortune in about seven hours.

The R-34 landed here yesterday after her history-making flight across the Atlantic and back, in excellent condition. One of her engines must be replaced, but this will be done after she arrives at East Fortune.

Aside from the rips in her envelope, she suffered practically no other damage.

Crowds of sightseers came to Pulham from London and many Norfolk towns to view the first trans-Atlantic airship today.

Major Scott, commander of the R-34, and other officers of her crew, emphasized today the ease with which they made the return journey from New York and the comfort they enjoyed. Particularly they pointed out that while ships beneath them were being tossed by a forty-mile gale that must have caused seasickness among their passengers, the R-34 rode the wind with scarcely any rocking.

CROSSED SEA IN 3 DAYS.

The R-34 completed her flight from Roosevelt Field, Mineola, N. Y., to the airdrome at this place in three days, three hours and six minutes. The distance is 3,300 miles.

She reached here at 7:02 Greenwich mean time Sunday morning (3:02 a. m., New York time).

A fiery crackle in the midst of the gray haze about fifteen miles to the eastward of Pulham at 6:56 Sunday morning gave the first hint to the eyes of the hundreds around the airdrome that their all-night vigil was about to be rewarded.

Intermittently this tiny spark gave pin-point stabs against the cloud banks as the sky wanderer's wireless answered the wireless call from Pulham, but R-34's bulk emerged with the cloud bank and remained invisible. Then suddenly there was an exclamation of "there she is!"

SIGHTED AT 5 MILES.

At a distance of five miles the sun caught the glint of the whizzing propellors. Then as the wisps of cloud were shredded away like a torn veil the R-34 came swiftly onward at a height of about a thousand feet, growing gradually from carp to albercore to aerial swordfish strongly swimming.

Straight across the airdrome then a wide circle to turn and come back against the slight wind, another curve and the giant dirigible came up against the northwest wind.

When the airship was about three hundred feet above the airdrome a trapdoor was seen to swing downward from the forward gondola. "Look out for your heads," somebody cried, and then a coiled rope unwounded like an angry snake as it spun earthward.

At the same instant R-34's nose pitched downward, answering the steersman's effort at the rudder. The groundward end of the rope was just out of reach of hundreds of grasping fingers, but one mechanic, making a giant leap, caught it. Then came a torrent of water from the ballast tanks, drenching hundreds of running men and girls.

R-34 IS ONLY A PIONEER, SAYS MAJOR SCOTT

Commander Believes the Dirigible Best Type to Cross Seas

By MAJOR G. H. SCOTT.
COMMANDER OF THE R 34

Special Cable Dispatch to Universal Service.

(Copyright, 1919, by Universal Service.)

Pulham, (100 miles northeast of London), July 14—I think I am a pretty fair prophet. The night we left New York I said we would be between seventy and eighty hours in crossing. We actually did it in seventy-five hours, three minutes, as against 108 hours on the outward journey.

This is exceedingly satisfactory to me since the last leg of the return was made under adverse weather and despite one broken engine.

I am convinced beyond doubt that the dirigible is the only type of trans-ocean voyager and the R-34 is only a pioneer. Larger and faster craft will follow.

Safety and dependable schedule in crossing depend wholly upon petrol carrying capacity and a consistent speed of seventy or eighty knots. We all believe good old R-34 has blazed the trail for ships of quadruple her size which will make trans-Atlantic air travel as common as sea travel is today.

72 KNOTS HIGHEST SPEED.

The first 800 miles of our homeward journey were the fastest. We reached a speed of seventy-two knots, which is equivalent to eighty-two miles, but didn't keep up this speed permanently.

I shall never forget the farewell sight of New York when we circled over Broadway shortly after midnight, at a height of 2,000 feet. Below us lay a fairyland of lights and we even detected thousands of white dots representing upturned faces between the lanes of lights.

It was the weirdest sight any of us had ever seen. The engines of our airship were too noisy for us to detect any sound from Broadway, but we believed the people down there were giving us hearty farewell cheers.

We had a strong wind behind us when we passed 150 miles south of Newfoundland, but as we drew eastward the wind veered around and got ahead of us though there was no great velocity.

OUT OF SIGHT FOR A DAY.

Thereafter we had light winds from various directions the whole way across and a lot of low clouds and fog, which prevented our getting sight of any sort for twenty-four hours in the middle part of our journey.

Most of our trip across was done above the lower cloud strata; the sea was not visible, which made it hard to estimate drift or speed.

Just before Ireland was reached we traveled six hours at 5,000 feet. All of us were very cold, particularly after the terrific heat that prevailed at New York.

We struck Ireland at the same spot where Alcock and Brown landed—Clifden.

The breakdown of one of the engines in the after car was not as serious as it might appear. Though this meant a loss of one-fifth of our driving power when we were 1,200 miles from East Fortune, it made practically no difference, because in a dirigible only four engines are used normally except when bucking head winds. Occasionally only three engines are necessary.

Really, compared with the dangers and the anxiety on our outward voyage, this return was a pleasure jaunt and we'll have to rack our brains to provide the correspondents with "sensation."

As far as I can remember the most sensational feature was when we discovered the cook asleep under the dining room table. No—No—don't make a mistake, it wasn't too much of that twelfth-hour rum which we took aboard on Hazelhurst Field, but he was sleeping for a perfectly excusable cause—that is, excusable in an airship. You'll have to get the cook's own story on that point.

But, incidentally, I wish to thank the benefactor who stowed some rum aboard just before our departure. The members of the R-34's crew have voted to build him a monument.

RUM SUPPLY A SECRET.

No sir! We don't dare reveal the name of this benefactor who risked the terrors of the law in dry America to guard us from the Arctic cold which we experienced when approaching Ireland.

We have a thousand gallons of petrol left in our tanks, which is a happy contrast with the terrifying shortage while approaching Long Island. If we had only known what a small consumption of petrol was ahead of us we wouldn't have left any members of the crew behind. We might even have brought back our stowaway.

To sum up the results of the round trip: It was not as difficult as we had expected though we had anxious moments during a thunderstorm over Nova Scotia and when the petrol was running low.

I was consumed with anxiety all the time the R-34 was at Hazelhurst because one of New York's famous thunderstorms would have wrenched her seaward in a jiffy.

SON IS EXECUTOR OF LIVINGSTON ESTATE

The will of William E. Livingston of Lowell, who died July 5, has been filed at Cambridge. It is dated July 29, 1911, and names his son, William Livingston of Lowell, executor. The estate is valued at $53,000.

The will of John H. Robinson of Somerville, who died June 1, has been allowed. Robert W. Oliver of Boston and Mary A. Jaques of Somerville have been appointed executors. The value of the estate is placed at $12,800 and the executors each furnished bonds of $2,000.

Lillian L. Page of Worcester has been appointed administratrix of the estate of her sister, Eva C. Dix of Melrose, who died May 12. She has given bond of $15,000. The estate is valued at $15,700.

DOCTORS IN DUEL TO THE DEATH WITH GERMS

ter's place. It is the contention of both that inoculation is unnecessary to prevent disease by germs.

Dr. Hill received a high tribute today from Health Commissioner Woodward, Dr. David B. Brough, Thomas Jordan and other officials of the department with whom he was associated, at which time he was in charge of the bacteriological laboratory.

Commissioner Woodward, who has known Dr. Hill for many years, stated that the young doctor was one of the first, if not the first, medical man to establish municipal bacteriological labratories.

DR. HILL'S LATEST BOOK.

His work in the Boston laboratory won him quick recognition throughout the country. His latest book, "New Public Health," has created much favorable comment. Commissioner Woodward stated that Dr. Hill was an expert epedemiologist and an expert in labratory work.

He was appointed under Mayor Quincy's administration. According to the commissioner he was a "find" and discovered by former Health Commissioner Samuel G. Durgin.

While in Boston he spent considerable time investigating the clams and oyster in and about Massachusetts waters in connection with their association with typhoid fever. His reports on the subject, pertaining to Boston Harbor are still referred to for professional opinion.

He was born in Ontario in 1871 and graduated from the University of Ontario in 1893.

BROKER REDMOND HELD ON LARCENY CHARGES

Charged with keeping a "bucket shop" and with larceny on two counts George F. Redmond, treasurer of G. F. Redmond & Co., brokers, was held today in $2,500 for trial. He pleaded not guilty on both indictments before Judge Cox in the Superior Criminal Court. The larceny charges are $293.74 in money and 200 shares of stock valued at $6,500, both the property of Peter N. Nelson.

ORDERS SONS TO PAY FOR FATHER'S SUPPORT

John Di Parlo and his brother Joseph, of the West End, today were ordered topay $5 a week each toward the support of their aged father by Judge Murray in the lower court. The father, Carmillo, who is sixty-five, has been living with his daughter on Green street. It was brought oht that the sons are each making $25 a week and are single.

BAD CHECK ARTIST APPEALS SENTENCE

Augustus F. Rose, alias Simpson, thirty-two, of Springfield was given six months by Judge Murray today on the charge of passing bad checks totalling $119 on the State Street Trust Company. He appealed and was held in $1,000. The police of Hartford and Worcester ade interested in the man.

MISS PUFFER SAW IN 'HONEY' MYTHICAL WHITE IDOL OF HER HEART

EXPLAINS GIFTS TO HAZZARD

Evidence Offered to Show Mrs. Hirsch Received Over $6,000 of Puffer Funds

Ayer, July 14.—Documents tending to show that Miss Mabel Puffer had given $6,715 to Mrs. Katherine Hirsch, Harvard Christian Science healer, were introduced today into the trial of Oliver Garfield (Honey) Hazzard, Miss Puffer's negro sweetheart, who is being tried on the charge of swindling her out of $6,000. Miss Puffer denied that she had given the healer the money.

Miss Puffer's mythical white man who, the eccentric spinster testified, "took the appearance" of Hazzard during her strange love affair with the negro, was again today dragged into Hazzard's trial.

Documents were introduced showing that Miss Puffer had been progressively giving away the rights to her own land to her woodchopping Othello; that he had obtained the rights to her meadows for five years; that he had even been given the disposition of the henhouse on the estate, and was planning, when arrest interrupted the romance, to start a store on her front piazza.

William H. Lewis, attorney for Hazzard, who is accused of having looted the Puffer estate of $6,000, opened up a vigorous cross-examination as soon as court opened.

Q.—Suppose I should say to you, Miss Puffer, "Good morning; I am Charles H. McKee." What would you say? A.—I should say you have a right to speak as you wish, but I would not believe you.

Q.—What is the difference between me and Charles H. McKee? A.—All individuals are alike.

Q.—Describe Mr. McKee's appearance. Was he an Adonis or a beast? A.—I have never been introduced to the individual. He was, in a general way, tall and dark complexioned.

Q.—Well, did you ever see him in the "movies"?

Witness said that she had not, but that he was tall, "slanted" and dark complexioned.

Q.—Was he as dark as Hazzard? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What is the difference between Mr. McKee and Mr. Hazzard? A.—Mr. Hazzard is a colored person.

Q.—Any other difference? A.—In the stature.

Q.—Any spiritual difference? A.—I have no knowledge of Mr. Hazzard's spiritual qualifications.

Q.—Was Mr. McKee a Christian Science practitioner? A.—I never saw his name listed as a practitioner.

Q.—Is Hazzard a Christian Scientist? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Do you know why Hazzard is here on trial? A.—Why, in the matter of the money and the property.

Q.—But you said Saturday you gave this money and property to McKee? A.—Yes, in the appearance of Hazzard.

Q.—Did you know Louis H. McKee? A.—No, sir.

Witness testified that she first came to know Arthur Garfield (Honey) Hazzard in 1913.

At this point Mr. Lewis introduced a number of documents, ranging from receipts to deeds, giving Hazzard temporary control of parts of her lands. The first was dated in 1913, the paper showing the witness had borrowed $1 from her negro choreman and demanded a receipt when she repaid it.

Some of these "deeds" gave Hazzard control of most of her property, with "the right to move buildings." Other documents showed payments by Hazzard for some of these privileges. Still others indicated that he intended opening a store on Miss Puffer's veranda, and using her barn for a storehouse.

PLOT TO DISRUPT SCIENCE CHURCH IS CHARGED

The recent court proceedings of the Christian Science Church were a part of a plan to disrupt the institution, according to a letter written by William B. Rathbon which was read in today's session in the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

Another startling statement was read from a letter also written by Rathbon, one of the directors who said that certain changes should be made in the church "or the dirty pool will remain unpurged."

SPECTATORS MOSTLY WOMEN.

Today's session of the hearing was more largely attended than any other, the majority of the spectators being women, who fanned themselves vigorously throughout the proceedings.

The morning session was almost entirely devoted to the reading by counsel of various letters which had a bearing on the removal of John V. Dittemore from the board of directors.

Charles E. Jarvis, corresponding secretary of the board, was called as a witness, but was asked few questions.

One letter from Mr. Dittemore was read in which he urged the trustees not to lose sight of the fact that the Publishing Society was one of the biggest and most active elements in the Christian Science movement. In another he asked the directors to interpret the policy of the Publishing Society "lovingly but firmly."

URGED VARIOUS REFORMS.

He also urged various reforms, stating that he felt in his heart he was willing to sacrifice any worldly pleasure, any mundane ambition, would give anything in life unselfishly for the cause of Christian Science.

The records of a directors' meeting in February, 1916, were then read. On February 6, 1916, the directors voted to have the opinion of counsel as to the legality of the trustees paying for counsel to superintend the disbursement of funds in the trustees' possession.

On Feb. 10, 1916, the directors interviewed Judge Smith as to the situation existing between the two boards. Judge Smith advised them, according to evidence presented, that they should get the written consent of the trustees for any action they might take. He also advised them, however, to make no concessions to the trustees.

In the letter written by Mr. Rathbon he was quoted as saying:

"Although we may desire to save the bodies of our brothers from the precipice on the verge of which they are buoyantly dancing, unless certain changes are made in the church that would be allowing the dirty pool to remain unpurged."

This letter also referred to "the most dangerous and treasonable design ever attempted by three Christian Scientists."

Before the letter was read there was a wrangle by counsel as to its admissibility. Counsel for the directors believed that it was advisable to admit it in the Dittemore case.

It was brought out that on Feb. 26, 1919, a resolution was introduced by Mr. Dicky and seconded by Mr. Rathbon, recommending that no copies of articles dictated or written by Mrs. Eddy be given out.

Witness Jarvis told of the proceedings at the meetings of the directors. At a meeting on February 24, he said the directors had a conference with the trustees, at which time the question of the succession of Dr. Allan H. Percy came up. Dr. Percy was head of the War Relief fund in Great Britain and Ireland. A letter from Mr. Dittemore was then read in which he expostulated over the differences between the directors and trustees, and said that the directors should declare three trusteeships vacant.

British Food Prices Going Up As Big Fight Opens

By FORBES FAIRBAIRN
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent)

London, July 14.—The British Food Ministry is girding its loins for the greatest battle against profiteering and high prices in the country's history. However, the ministry is decidedly pessimistic as to the prospects of any decrease in price. In fact it rather looks for an increase.

GOOD SOLDIER FREED BY COMMISSIONER HAYES

Because he was a good soldier while in service, Mark L. Nicholson, one of the veterans of the British attack on Gallipoli, was discharged by United States Commissioner Hayes today, after he was convicted of unlawfully wearing a British uniform. Nicholson was arrested near the Hotel Touraine several days ago, wearing the uniform of a Scottish Highlander. His home is at No. 124 Harvard street, Brookline. He was discharged many months ago. Nicholson lost an eye and suffered other injuries at Gallipoli. He discarded the uniform before he left the courtroom and put on a suit of civilian clothes which his wife brought for him.

SLASHED WIFE HE TOLD TO UNTIE SHOELACES

Because his wife wouldn't get out of bed at 1 a. m. and untie his shoelaces, Antonia Schetino, thirty-two, of Webster street, East Boston, proceeded to carve her up, according to testimony before Judge Barnes in the East Boston Court today. Tony was sentenced to a year in prison and, appealing, was held in $1,000. His wife, Vincenza, testified he came home at one in the morning and found her in bed with their six months old infant. He was annoyed because she and her four small children had gone to bed before his return, and ordered her to get up and take off his shoes. When she hesitated he drew a knife and attacked her. Dr. Swartz took three stitches in her scalp and three stitches in her cheek.

MORE PATRONESSES FOR CONCERT AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., July 14.—Additional patronesses for the concert at the rooms of the historical society on Tuesday are Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, Mrs. Paul Denckla Mills, Mrs. George D. Widener, Mrs. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, Mrs. George Peabody Eustis, Mrs. Woodward Blair, Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal, Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr., and Mrs. William H. Reynolds.

118 VESSELS BUILT IN U. S. YARDS IN JUNE

Washington, July 14.—American shipbuilders are achieving new records in putting out ships to carry American products abroad. During June they delivered 118 vessels, with a total tonnage of [illegible] deadweight to the shipping board, it was announced today. This is an increase of 106 per cent over deliveries in June a year ago when the total tonnage was 280,100 deadweight.

BOY HURT BY PRESS SUES NEWTON HOME FOR $20,000

The Working Boys' Home, Newton, has been sued for $20,000 by James Ferris, a minor, who sues through his father, Anton [illegible] Ferris of Boston.

He alleges that on March 14, 1913, while working on a printing press at the home, he was severely injured owing to the defective condition of the press.

BLIND MAN SAYS HICKSON MADE HIM SEE

His sight partially restored, he avers, through the ministrations of James Moore Hickson, the Christian healer, John H. Peak, sixty-four, of No. 106 Dorchester street, South Boston, who has been almost totally blind for two years, went today to St. Paul's Cathedral to bear testimony to the efficacy of the treatment.

Peak was overjoyed by the improvement in his condition.

"When I was brought to see Mr. Hickson last week," he said, "I was almost totally blind. Two years ago I was operated upon for a cataract in one eye and after the operation the other eye became affected, and since that time I have been in almost total darkness.

"Upon arriving home the other day after being treated by Mr. Hickson, I was amazed to find that I could see a little. Since then I have been praying almost incessantly, and I am greatly improved. Of course my sight is not fully restored, but I can see you now. Last week I could not have seen you."

Hundreds of persons who were attracted to the cathedral by reports of the success of Hickson's mission were grievously disappointed when they learned that the Englishman's engagement book is filled and that he will receive no more supplicants. A notice to this effect has been posted at the cathedral.

When the doors of St. Paul's opened today for the second week of the mission hundreds of afflicted persons were on hand. Of these only a comparative few had cards entitling them to treatment by Mr. Hickson.

In the crowd were a large number of out-of-town visitors, some of whom had come from points in northern Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. As few had made the necessary appointment beforehand, the great majority will have to return home untreated.

Dr. Hickson today expressed the hope that the physicians of New England would co-operate in the movement which his mission is inaugurating. He said that he in no way depreciated the work of the medical men in advocating healing through faith and prayer primarily.

"I wish again to speak about an incorrect impression that seems to be current," he said. "My work is not psycho-theraupy or mental healing. It is purely spiritual. And the power of healing is not in me but in God and prayer."

APPEALS SENTENCE FOR STRIKING PATROLMAN

Tony Demassi, 21, of Clinton street, Chelsea, was arraigned in the Chelsea Court today charged with assault and battery upon Patrolman Harry Ferguson of the Chelsea police on June 16. He was found guilty and given three months in the House of Correction. He appealed. On the evening of June 16 a robbery was committed in Mill Hill, Chelsea. Ferguson arrested Demassi as one of those implicated. While at the patrol box with the officer, Demassi struck Ferguson, and escaped, to be brought down later by a revolver shot in his left hand.

Nominations by Wilson

Washington, July 14.—The following nominations were sent by the President to the Senate this afternoon:

To be assistant commissioner of patents, Melvin H. Coulston of New York. To be director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, Phillip B. Kennedy of New York. To be first assistant director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, Roy S. Macelwee of New York.

DANIEL J. KILEY WOULD SUCCEED PELLETIER

Former Council President Takes Out Papers for District Attorneyship

Daniel J. Kiley, former president of the Common Council and former Representative, took out nomination papers today for district attorney of Suffolk County. His name will be balloted upon in both the Democratic and Republican primaries.

Mr. Kiley issued a statement of the reasons for his candidacy, accompanied by a copy of a letter of endorsement from former Mayor Thomas N. Hart.

Former Mayor Hart states:

"I am pleased to endorse you to all good citizens, Republican and Democrats alike, as a man of honor, integrity and capacity, who could be depended upon to restore public confidence in the office and protect its great power from political and professional abuse."

Mr. Kiley set forth as planks in his platform:

"I believe a district attorney should be willing to work at all times and not use the county's time for private practise and selfish gain.

"The office should never be used as an advertising asset for the exploitation of political candidates nor to enrich a select coterie of lawyers.

"A district attorney should keep a watchful eye against the abuse or misuse of the indicting agency and not allow the criminal machinery to be used as a collection agency.

"There should be absolute freedom from suspicion of ulterior purpose, whether it be financial gain or political advancement.

"The Grand Jury should not be asked or advised to indict unless there is good reason to believe a conviction can be secured."

District Attorney Pelletier will seek a re-election to that office, despite opposition. He filed nomination papers today for the primaries of both parties. He has held the office for ten years.

Mr. Pelletier beat his opponent to it in getting his papers into the Secretary of State's office, just preceding Kiley.

Jasper Bacon, a Legion of Honor man, filed papers for Senator in the 5th Suffolk District. This seat in the Senate is now held by John J. Walsh.

POLICE READY FOR VIOLENCE BY "REDS"

Superintendent Crowley Says His Men Would Wipe Terrorists Off Face of the Earth

"Boston Reds attempting terrorism and violence today as part of a Bastille Day celebration would be wiped off the face of the earth. The police are ready for them."

This was the answer of Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley to a question as to police precautions against a possible "Red" demonstration here today, the anniversary of the fall of the French stronghold. He added that he expected no demonstration.

Commissioner Curtis said, "The men have been trained to the use of machine guns and are now being trained to use rifles. Guns have been distributed at various stations. We are confident we can cope with any situation."

Both police officials are on the alert. Ever since the recent bomb outrages police authorities everywhere have been expecting another organized attempt at wholesale terrorism on some such anniversary as that which the world celebrates today.

Anarchistic literature confiscated continues to refer in cryptic terms to such a day, "a day long to be remembered."

Superintendent Crowley was inclined to doubt that any organized demonstration was being planned by the radicals for this revolutionary anniversary. He added, "We are ready today and every day to cope with the situation in case the radicals to start trouble. We will wipe them off the face of the earth, but I don't believe they will come out in the open and fight."

LIST OF REGISTERED VOTERS SHOWS 98,997

The first list of registered voters in the city for this year, issued today by the election commissioners, shows a decided drop due to the large number of men in the service. The total for this year is 98,997, a drop from 102,-912. Men may register at the commissioners' office from now until Sept. 20.

Gets Jamaica Ginger Jag and Demands His Own Arrest

Newton has the honor of being the first place hereabouts to produce a Jamaica ginger 'jag.' William H. Ryan was sent to Bridgewater from the Newton court today for having imbibed himself into a state of joy through Jamaica ginger. Ryan spent a large part of yesterday consuming the ginger.

Last evening, full of 'pep,' he wandered forth. He desired to dare a policeman to arrest him for having consumed so much ginger. But he couldn't find a policeman. In desperation he betook himself to the home of Patrolman J. J. Sartwell and knocked.

"I'm full of Jamaica ginger. Why don't you arrest me?" he asked Hartwell.

"I will," said Hartwell, suiting the action to the word, and marching Bill off to the palatial but deserted sleeping quarters of the police station.

GEN. D'ESPEREY TO LEAD BATTLE AGAINST "REDS"

London, July 14.—A French and Rumanian army commanded by General d'Esperey, former allied commander in the Balkans, will soon attack the Hungarian Red army, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Vienna today, quoting a report which had been received there from Bucharest. The plan to attack follows an unsuccessful effort to induce the Hungarians to establish a republic, it was said.

FOUR TROOPSHIPS WITH 11,418 LEAVE FRANCE

Washington, July 14.—Four troopships, carrying 11,418 returning officers and men, sailed on July 9 from French ports for New York, the War Department announces. The ships are the cruiser South Dakota, with 1,896 troops, and due July 19; the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, with 5,635, due July 17; the Panaman, with 2,206, due July 19, and the Dakotan, with 1,681, and due July 19.

THEFT OF $500 IN TIRES AND TOOLS IN QUINCY

Auto bandits broke into the plant of S. Scammell & Sons on Quincy avenue, Quincy, and stole over $500 worth of tools, tires and other goods. They gained entrance by forcing a window lock. The desks in the office were ransacked.

SLADEN AND BAY STATE MEN ON HONOR LIST

Brigadier-General and Others Awarded Distinguished Service Cross

By International News Service.

Washington, July 14.—For remarkable heroism in action, General Pershing has awarded the Distinguished Service Cross to six officers and fourteen enlisted men of the American Expeditionary Force, the War Department announced today. Among those decorated was Brigadier-General F. W. Sladen, Headquarters Fifth Brigade, Third Division. On Oct. 14, 1918, General Sladen, upon learning that the front line was held up by enemy machine gun fire, proceeded to the advanced position through three kilometers of heavy enemy artillery fire. He was then almost exhausted from forty-eight hours of continuous duty. Upon arrival, he found the battalion commander had been killed and the troops disorganized. Once fainting, but refusing to be relieved, General Sladen personally rallied the units, and, due to his efforts, the American troops carried the action successfully. His home is at Flushing, L. I.

Among the other men awarded are: Lieutenant Ellsworth A. Stone, 326th Infantry, Lynn, Mass.; Lieutenant R. L. Simpson, Company H, 56th Infantry, Louisville, Ky.; Sergeant Colin B. Joe, Company K, 23d Infantry, Milton, Mass.; Corporals Anthony M. Wallace, Company E, 60th Infantry, Bridgeport, Ct.; Otis L. Stone, Company K, 104th Infantry, Stoneham, Mass. Private Oscar E. Johnson, Company B, 60th Infantry, Norwalk, Ct.

ROPE BREAKS AS SICK MAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Newburyport, July 14.—The weakness of the rope with which he attempted to hang himself saved the life of David S. Dow, 62 years old. He fastened one end of the rope to the balustrade of a stairway in his home at No. 9 Salem street.

The crash of his body to the floor as the rope parted brought other members of the family. They found him unconscious. Physicians and policemen were summoned and they revived him after much effort. He had been in ill health for some time, preventing him from working at his trade as a shoemaker.

Beef—
It's Cheap Food

Compared with prewar price levels, beef is one of the cheapest of essential foods today. Other foods have advanced to much higher points—and remained there.

A survey conducted by the Health Commissioner of Chicago showed the following price increases for the current year over 1913-14:

Flour	210%
Sugar	115%
Milk	87%
Round Steak	86%
Eggs	80%
Sirloin Steak	61%

JACKSON SAYS 'L' PLANS TO REDUCE FARES SOON

CHAIRMAN FOR ZONE SYSTEM; USELESS EMPLOYES TO GO

[illegible] we intend [illegible]. A committee is already investigating the [illegible]."

"[illegible] present 10-cent [illegible] the maximum?" he was asked.

"[illegible]," he replied, "and I will resign before I agree to having it increased further. I am going to make every effort for a reduction. As the trustees said in the statement given out last week, when the present fare went into effect, they felt that the ten-cent fare probably would be the maximum, as cost was approaching its maximum.

"If anyone will take the trouble to examine the law under which the public trustees are running the Elevated he will see that there was nothing for us to do but increase the revenue to meet the expenditures. Personally I favor the zone system and would like to see it put into operation. I believe that mileage should be the basis of cost. The average ride in Boston is about four and one-half miles. In Cleveland, where the fare is now six cents, it is only two and one-half miles.

"I believe that a man should pay for what he gets. If he rides a mile he should pay for a mile. Of course there are many arguments against the zone system. The man living in West Roxbury will tell you that he built a house there because he believed he was going to have a five-cent fare. No one ever promised him that.

"One of the most important things in this whole situation is the question of subway rentals. The car rider is being taxed one cent a ride in subway rentals and I believe that should be abolished. I shall remain in this board if for no other purpose than to go before the Legislature next session and endeavor to secure the removal of the subway rentals.

"It costs the people about $1,500,000 a year for subway rentals and that would represent a good sinking fund if it could be released."

MANY WALK TO RESORTS.

Mr. Jackson declared that the zone system being tried out in New Jersey was a good one and he would like to see it tried out in Boston. A system of checks makes it easy to collect the exact fare due the road from the rider.

He further stated that the threatened strike of motormen and conductors had nothing to do with the ten-cent fare, as increases in wages were not considered when the fare was raised.

Today additional thousands of former commuters patronized the steam trains, rode in automobiles or on bicycles, or walked. The falling off of traffic on the trolleys was much more noticeable than last week.

Because of the heat of Sunday officials of the road maintained that their business was practically normal, but were unable to furnish figures at that time. Nevertheless it was evident that many persons walked to the various resorts.

The New Haven, Boston & Albany and Boston & Maine reported considerable increases in the number of passengers carried last week, although as in the case of the Elevated, figures were not available. The Boston & Maine, however, produced statistics showing the way their business picked up last week.

SEEK TO AVOID STRIKE.

On July 10 the increase on the Southern Division local lines was 5.7 per cent. over that of the day before; on July 11, however, the increase had jumped to 20 per cent. On the Fitchburg local lines the increase on the 10th over the 9th was 12 per cent., while the increase on the 11th was the same, 12 per cent. over the 10th.

Local and international officers of the Carmen's Union are attempting to stave off a strike.

It is considered doubtful that these counsels of moderation will prevail, as the men are growing uneasy over the delay of the Federal War Labor Board in acting on their petition for more wages.

John H. Reardon, member of the executive board of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, will preside at the meeting tonight. Thomas Shine, another international officer, M. J. Higgins, president of the Boston local; William J. Timmins, business agent; J. J. Cronin, C. H. Clark and T. J. Mahoney, who signed the statement issued Saturday night and the notices sent broadcast yesterday, will be at the meeting to address the members of the union.

Mass Meetings to Be Held in East and South Boston

A mass meeting of the citizens of East Boston to protest against the ten-cent fare on the Boston Elevated is to be held at Faneuil Hall on Wednesday evening.

Residents of this section, declaring they have to pay the highest fares charged by any street railway company in the world for a ride of similar length, will unite in concerted action against the ten-cent fare, according to Representative Thomas A. Niland, who is completing arrangements for the meeting.

Several members of the Legislature and prominent residents of East Boston will be among the speakers. They will point out that the distance from Bowdoin square to Maverick square is less than one mile, for which they are charged ten cents.

Two other protest meetings expressing the indignation of East Boston and South Boston residents at the fare rate are scheduled for tonight. The St. Thomas Catholic Association will meet in the banquet hall of the Quincy House, where speakers will voice the objection of thousands of residents of East Boston to the ten-cent fare.

The other meeting is to be held in the municipal building, South Boston, where a protest meeting of citizens is to take place.

A protest meeting will also be held in Jamaica Plain Library Hall, Sedgwick street, on Wednesday night.

Girl Tries Suicide; Mother Promises Better Treatment

Lawrence, July 14.—Alleged ill-treatment by her parents drove Josephine Flato, 17 years old, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michele Flato of No. 18 Bennett street, to attempt suicide in the Merrimack River.

Her action followed an argument at the supper table and she was rescued by Edward Carter, who heard her screams as she struck the water, jumped in and pulled her ashore.

At the police station Josephine declared that out of a $16 weekly wage, which she earns in a local mill, her mother allows her 10 cents a week spending money. She also charged that her mother was extremely severe in her treatment. The police extracted a promise from the mother that she would treat the girl better.

People of Lynn and Suburbs Refuse to Pay Increased Fare

Lynn, July 14.—Indignation over the recent boost in fares on the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, formerly the Bay State system, to 10 cents, has been growing in this city and adjacent townships.

The riding residents of East and West End sections of Lynn, rather than pay the increase in fare, are walking to the city centre to do their merchandising. This is evidenced in other sections of the city where jitney lines have not already appeared, but where it is expected they will extend, if the street railway company persists in demanding this high rate of fare.

Mayor Creamer has labeled the recent fare boost as a serious mistake on the part of the trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company.

Vehement protest is made against the high fare for short haul riding.

Jitneys and steam roads are reaping a harvest. Traffic to the beaches on the Lynn Shore Drive is either on foot or by jitney. Traffic between Lynn and Swampscott is largely by jitney and steam trains. Jitneys are carrying passengers from Central square, Lynn, to Monument square, Swampscott, for five cents as compared with the double rate charged by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company.

Traffic between Lynn and Marblehead is light as compared with the patronage enjoyed by the road prior to the present rate of fare.

Starters in Central square, this city, announce the cars as they appear for passengers, but the patrons are few, hardly exceeding a dozen, and in many instances less than that, when leaving for a given point.

COMB WOODED HILLS FOR MISSING MAN

Bristol, N. H., July 14.—Searching parties, led by Captain William R. Hill of the State Guard, and Lieutenant John W. Dole of the Boy Scouts are hunting for Andrew B. Smith, 28 years old and single, who disappeared from his boarding house last Friday night. The wooded hills in the outlying districts are being combed in widening circles.

Mr. Smith has lived in this town several years, working at a factory where crutches are made. He retired at 11 o'clock Friday night. At 3 o'clock the next morning someone in the house, happening to go by his open door, noticed that he was not in his room. This led to investigation.

MILLIONAIRE COAL PASSER IS HELD IN NAVY

Eli Perkins Has Two Years More to Wait; Income $450,000 a Year

By Universal Service.

New York, July 14.—Although he has an income of about $450,000 a year, Eli Perkins, coal passer aboard the Imperator, was on his job shoveling coal when the great ship poked her nose into port.

Eli surely would like to leave that stokehole and buy an ice cream soda or two out of his more than sufficient income—but has two years more to serve on his enlistment in the navy.

If he had any one dependent on him or was desirous of pursuing some form of study, he could gain his release.

ACHING TO SPEND A CENT.

But his parents aren't in need, and as for studying—well, Eli had the happy idea today that maybe after all he could persuade Uncle Sam that he'd like right well to perfect himself in studying how best to spend $450,000 a year.

Eli, who is thirty, was raising corn on an eighty-acre farm near Eastland, Texas, which he had bought with his savings, when he enlisted. The last time he came in on the Imperator he received a letter stating that an oil gusher had burst through the surface on his farm and was showing 6,000 barrels a day and that his income was probably more than $450,000 a year.

KEEPS ON PASSING COAL.

He was urged to secure his release from the navy, but no provision had been made in the enlistment agreement for the early discharge of owners of oil-gushing farms. So Eli still passes coal.

"Gee, I don't want to wait until I have a billion or two before I get hold of some of that money," he said.

"CHINATOWN" PICNICS AT CANOBIE LAKE

Boston's "Chinatown" was deserted today for the annual picnic of the Chinese of this city at Canobie Lake. Leaders in the business and social life of the Chinese here, elders of the colony in oriental costume and thoroughly Americanized young men in the latest Broadway fashions were well represented, as well as solemn little Chinese children.

LEGAL FIGHT ON BEER OPENS TOMORROW

Judge Anderson to Hear Arguments in Case Against Petts and Vogel

The first legal battle relative to violation of the war-time prohibition law will take place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Federal Building where the argument to the demurrer in the test case against Sanford F. Petts and Leopold H. Vogel, liquor dealers at No. 342 Washington street, will be made.

The demurrer, which has not been filed as yet, will be heard before Judge Anderson. It is expected that a speedy decision will be rendered.

Both liquor dealers are charged with selling to an agent of the Department of Justice one-half pint of beer which contained more than one-half of one per cent. of alcohol. Both men appeared before Judge Anderson a few days ago and upon pleading not guilty to the information, were released in $500 bail.

Before United States Attorney Thomas J. Boynton, Assistant United States Attorney Lewis Goldberg and James A. Hatton today the continued conference of the brewers and the attorneys for the Retail Liquor Dealers Association, was held relative to the regulation of the liquor situation regarding the prosecution of the war-time prohibition law.

Those attending besides the Federal attorneys were Messrs. Gray, of the Reuter and Houghton breweries; McCormack, of the McCormack Brewery; President Doherty of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, and Attorney's Leonard and McCormack, who represent the association.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MOTHER SUPERIOR

Funeral services were held at the Church of Our Lady, Newton, today for Mother Superior Agnes Maria of the Sisters of Charity, who was head of the convent school of the church. Clergymen from all parts of the diocese attended the solemn high mass of requiem, which was sung by Rev. Laurence J. Slattery. Rev. W. J. Roche was deacon, Rev. C. J. Quirbach sub-deacon and Rev. Robert Mantle master of ceremonies. Interment was at Convent Station, N. J.

HELD QUINCY WOMAN FOR THEFT IN LACONIA, N. H.

At the request of the authorities of Laconia, N. H., Mrs. Rose Vachon, eighteen, of East Howard street, Quincy, has been taken into custody by the Quincy police. It is claimed that the young woman took a dress from a Laconia store, saying she wished to show it to her husband.

Bear Oil Grows Hair

One of the potential ingredients of Kotalko—for the hair—is genuine bear oil, procured through hunters at a large cost. There are other active ingredients not found in any other hair preparation. Kotalko is an ointment. It has succeeded in many cases of baldness, falling hair and dandruff when every other hair lotion or treatment has proved futile. A $300 guarantee is offered to Kotalko users.

Why become or remain bald if you can grow hair? If others have obtained a new growth through Kotalko, why not you? Girlish, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the world have been using the saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint.

This simple and harmless face bath is a splendid thing for the outdoor girl, since sun, wind and flying dust are so provocative of squinting and other contortions which cause wrinkles and crow's-feet. Also it is fine to freshen up a tired face in hot, depressing weather.—Advertisement.

Constipation Results When Hot Weather Stops Exercise

WHEN the system has become accustomed to a certain daily routine of exercise and food, health is quick to suffer if that routine is interfered with. The bowels are first to notice the change.

Different water is enough to constipate. Changes of food when traveling, much sitting by those accustomed to long walks will do it. It is especially true that when elderly people change their routine they quickly become constipated. Yet elderly people should be particularly careful to keep their bowels open, especially during the hot months.

A better remedy for the purpose cannot be found on a druggist's shelf than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin which trains the stomach-muscles to do their work naturally so that medicines can be dispensed with. Only a small dose is needed, and unlike harsh physics and cathartics, it acts gently and without griping.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size, or a free trial bottle will be sent on receipt of your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

STARVING CREW ENTERS PORT FOR FOOD

Steamship Botsford, From Barcelona to New York, Delayed by Hurricane

With officers and crew nearing the end of the short rations on which they had subsisted for three days and a fireman throwing in the last shovel of sweepings of the coal bunkers, the American steamship Botsford put into Boston harbor today for coal, water and provisions. The vessel was bound for New York from Barcelona, and under the command of Captain Hancock.

The Botsford sailed from Barcelona on June 18 in ballast and coaled at Gibraltar on June 23. On July 4 a hurricane was encountered which the Botsford, a small wooden vessel of low power, was barely able to survive. It was blown 120 miles off its course and encountered heavy weather again on July 7 and 10. The unexpectedly long stay at sea told seriously on the coal and her supplies.

Just as the vessel was casting anchor here today, the main steam pipe broke. Had this accident occurred at sea, officers of the Botsford predicted that they might have starved to death before the pipe could have been repaired and the nearest port made.

There were forty-two officers and men on the Botsford. Supplies were hurried out to them from the pier as soon as their condition became known.

Pelletier Looks Into Dishonest Slot Machines

Slot machines which return nothing for money deposited are to be the subject of an investigation, according to a letter from District Attorney John C. Pelletier to Representative Thomas A. Niland of East Boston. Mr. Pelletier's letter is in reply to one from Mr. Niland urging action in the matter.

In Mr. Pelletier's opinion, the cheated purchaser has no redress. His letter follows:

"I have your letter of July 8 and note what you say about the action of the Boston Central Labor Union on Sunday last regarding slot machines in public places which do not return anything for money deposited.

"I know of no law controlling this matter, and in the absence of proof that the machines were manufactured with the purpose of not registering and returning property, I fear there is no remedy in the criminal law. However, I have turned the matter over to a special man and am calling it to the attention of the company, and will let you know what explanation is given."

MERCHANTS ASK WIDENING OF TREMONT ST.

Would Take Slice of Common to Relieve Auto Congestion

Relief must soon be found for traffic congestion on Tremont and other downtown streets, merchants of that district declare. They are giving a great deal of serious thought to the problem.

With the return of the automobile industry to a pre-war basis, they see further trouble ahead. There are between six and seven thousand more automobiles in use in Boston now than at the end of 1918.

It is estimated that there are nearly fifteen thousand orders for cars in Greater Boston on which the dealers have been unable to make deliveries. When these vehicles are added to those already on the streets, business men say it will literally be more than the traffic can bear.

WOULD TAKE SLICE OF COMMON.

The plan most generally favored by merchants along Tremont street is to cut off a slice of the Common and add it to the roadway between Park and Boylston streets. That would be the simplest and cheapest way, did not tradition-loving Boston regard the Common as almost sacred. There is a fear among a certain portion of the city's population that should any concession in the form of a small bit of the Common be granted to encroaching business, it would only be the opening wedge and in a few years the Common would be no more.

This idea is scoffed at by the Tremont street merchants, who assert that the Common has no more ardent protectors than they, but the business men think it only common sense to devote a small stretch of the people's playground toward widening of Tremont street. Adequate street facilities are fully as important to the public as the Common, these men say.

Moving the mall and subway stations back ten or twenty feet could be accomplished with little expense and inconvenience, it is pointed out. The subway stairs could be turned with little trouble.

FAVOR ONE WAY STREET.

Other means of relieving Tremont street congestion are being considered by the merchants. James J. Cotter, an executive of F. P. O'Connor Company, believes making it a one way street with the traffic current alternating to Washington street would help. Northbound traffic only is now permitted on that street.

Mr. Cotter suggests that Washington be made a southbound traffic street and Tremont northbound. This would permit traffic from the south part of the city to swing north at Boylston and Tremont. Should vehicles be compelled to cross Tremont to Washington in order to go north, the congestion at this already crowded corner would be worse than ever, Mr. Cotter believes.

Tremont street merchants were called before the city commissioners last week for advice on how to relieve the traffic congestion. It had been proposed to forbid vehicles stopping on Tremont street, even to discharge passengers. This is vigorously opposed by the merchants.

NEWTON COUPLE SUES FOR $7,000 DAMAGES

Seven thousand dollars damages are asked of Elizabeth A. Robinson of Newton, in a suit filed in Middlesex County Superior Court, Cambridge. The plaintiffs are Mrs. Alice Clayton of Newton and her husband, John W. Clayton. Mrs. Clayton says that on January 29, while walking in front of the Robinson property at No. 81 Newell street, Newton, she slipped on some ice and was severely injured. She asks $5,000. The husband seeks $2,000 damages for loss of his wife's services and medical expenses.

Mrs. Edward Brown of Medford has been sued for $5,000 by Virginia Schaffner of Medford, a minor, who is suing through her father, Earl Schaffner. It is claimed that on May 8 the young girl was severely burned by a fire started by the defendant in front of her home, No. 10 Carney street, Medford.

MILLIONAIRE AND PAUPER CATS IN COMMON HOME

The Animal Rescue League is the cat's best friend. When "Tabby" strays from rich or poor, especially in vacation days, the society gives them shelter, and if they are hopelessly ill they are mercifully put to death in electric baskets. Maurice Shea, ex-sergeant in the 26th, is the merciful "lord high executioner."

"Beacon street doesn't go away to the beach any more and leave its cats to starve at home."

This on the word of Mrs. Huntington Smith, president of the Animal Rescue League. "There used to be a time when the Back Bay cat fared the worst of any cat all over the city. That he was a little millionaire in the Winter time didn't keep his tummy round and plump o' Summers.

"But that's all different now," says Mrs. Smith. "Beacon street brings its cats to us. Yet still the suffering among cats goes on, quite dreadfully, particularly in the Summer."

"In the West End, the South End and the North End," says Mrs. Smith, "the people dread killing their cats. We so often hear, 'It's such a pity to kill our kittens; they are so cunning.'

"The kittens are kept, litters of five or six, three or four times a year. And misery multiplies. We have, here at the Animal Rescue League, one worker, Mrs. Abbie Bates, whose particular duty it is to go hunt these derelict cats and bring them to us for merciful killing. 'The little cat woman,' she has been called by children of the West End for years now.

HUB LEPER IN PHILADELPHIA IN CUSTODY

Escaped From Detention Hospital Two Months Ago: Admits Identity

Nicholas Foniadakis, the leper who escaped from the Detention Hospital in this city two months ago, was picked up by the Philadelphia police, according to information received by Health Commissioner William C. Woodward today.

Dr. Woodward immediately notified the Federal authorities, asking them to take charge of the man, thereby obviating the necessity of transporting him to Boston.

Foniadakis, who is twenty-five years old, was employed in a Boston restaurant when it was discovered that he was suffering from a skin disease. Examination at the Detention Hospital on Southampton street developed the fact that the man was in an advanced stage of leprosy.

Foniadakis was informed that he would be sent to Penikese Island, whereupon he walked out of the hospital and dropped from sight. A reward was offered for the apprehension of the man, but without result.

At that time a controversy was started as to whether or not it would be possible for a policeman to arrest him. A decision was eventually made to the effect that the health authorities should be notified when the man was located and they would take charge of him.

However, according to the information received by Dr. Woodward, the police of Philadelphia had no scruples about taking charge of the man, who had two bank books and readily admitted his identity. It is not known here whether or not the policeman who made the arrest will be isolated.

Dundee-Valger Quarrel Will Be Battle of Lefts—Both Boys in Good Shape

By JACK CONWAY.

It will be a battle of left hands when Johnny Dundee and Benny Valger meet in a twelve-round bout at Mechanics Building tomorrow night under the auspices of the Armory A. A.

For the past seven years Dundee's dazzling left jab and hook has enabled him to keep pace with the world's foremost lightweights. His remarkable speed has also been an asset in making it possible for him to score as often as he has with his left.

Valger, too, boasts of a left hand which shoots out with the rapidity of bullets leaving a machine gun. Frankie (Young) Britt is one of the fastest lightweights in the East, but he did not experience much success in dodging Valger's left. The result is that the French Flash is credited with two victories over the New Bedford youth.

It is expected that there will be a large crowd on hand when the men enter the ring as the match has aroused more interest than any contest arranged by any of the local clubs for a long time. Ivey Lewis announces that he'll be on the job today at the Armory A. A.'s headquarters at No. 1160 Washington street. The office at Mechanics Building will also be kept open tomorrow and also on the night of the fight.

It will be dark at the Fenway A. A. tonight. Roy Green was unable to secure a blue-ribbon attraction and so called off festivities. He'll have another of his bang-up cards next Monday night which will be pleasing news for the fans. Since taking charge of the matchmaking end of the program at the Back Bay club, Green has been batting for well over .750.

Bombardier Wells, former British heavyweight champion, is planning to make another trip to America. The Briton is not the greatest fighter in the world, but he would give the international flavor to a ring card which seems to be about all that is needed nowadays to put the money into the box office.

At Marlboro Friday evening Walter Butler and Johnny Veto will exchange blows. Neither of these youths believes in parlor boxing and as a result the fans should witness a lively mill.

Jack Dempsey is apparently a terrific puncher, but there are many of the old-timers who believe that Sam Langford at his best was able to hit harder than the heavyweight champion. The blow-by-blow story of the Dempsey-Willard tussle proves they are correct.

The experts who were at the ringside are almost unanimous in declaring that Dempsey paralyzed Willard's nerve system by a left hook in the first round. The punch floored the Kansan. Dempsey then scored six more knockdowns in this session, but he could not knock Willard out.

Willard was helpless in the second and third sessions. His brain was dull, while he could hardly move his feet or arms. And yet Dempsey could not knock him out. He was arm weary, at the end of the third frame, from hitting his opponent with left and right hand smashes.

If the Langford of ten years ago had been in Dempsey's position, Willard would have been knocked out in the first round. Once the "Tar Baby" dazed an opponent it was mighty good policy for the fans to start for the exits. He would usually end the contest with the next smash. Nobody, however, has yet hailed Dempsey as a second Langford which is very good judgment.

VERMONT STATE GOLF PLAY TO BE RESUMED

Bennington, Vt., July 14.—The annual tournaments of the Vermont Golf Association, discontinued during the war, are to be resumed at the Mt. Anthony Country Club, at Old-Bennington, August 7, 8 and 9.

The Governor McCullough cup, presented to the association by the Mt. Anthony club for annual competition, will be awarded to the four-player team from among the Vermont clubs making the lowest aggregate score in the qualifying round.

POLO PROGRAM AT NARRAGANSETT PIER

Narragansett Pier, R. I., July 14.—There will be a polo tournament at the Point Judith Country Club from July 29 to August 9, and a round robin series running through August, with Narragansett, Rhode Island and other handicap cups, all arranged by and under the supervision of Philip S. P. Randolph, president of the Point Judith Country Club. It is expected that seven teams, including one representing the army, will take part in the tournament.

CORBETT'S COLUMN

"Rowing is the sport that transforms weaklings into real athletes; the sport that has no equal in the all-around development of the human body."

So says Joe Wright, coach of the University of Pennsylvania crews and one of the real physical marvels of America, despite the fact that he is 55 years old now.

"The combination of fresh air, sunshine, water and exhilaration that rowing brings, built me up from a rather frail kid to a powerful youngster," declares Wright.

"What it did for me it can do for every one else. Pulling at the oars brings practically every muscle of the body into play.

"The arms and legs are strengthened, the back and shoulders become powerful, the chest expands through the stimulus of deep breathing, the lungs become wonderful in their functioning powers.

"And, best of all, the muscles of the stomach and intestines are built up to a point where trouble in that region of the body becomes almost unknown thereafter."

GREAT RACE WITH NICHOLS.

"The toughest race of my entire career was when Vivian Nichols beat me in a sculling race by a foot on the Thames," relates Wright. "Earlier in the day I had stroked the Argonaut Eight. Then my friends insisted that I meet Nichols in the singles—on the same afternoon.

"To please them I did. All along the course Nichols and I fought it out. Never more than half a boat length separated us. The lead shifted a dozen times and toward the finish it was changing with every stroke.

"Nichols had his blades in the water—and mine were out of it ready to plunge for another stroke—as we crossed the line. And Nichols won."

Wright insists that it takes something like ten years to develop an oarsman.

"It's four or five years before an oarsman really becomes good," declares the veteran coach. "After he has reached that point he doesn't usually become of championship calibre for another five years. Then, however, he can be counted among the topnotchers for five to ten years more.

WHEN TO START ROWING.

"If a fellow starts rowing at fifteen he is good at twenty, great at twenty-five and perhaps still a wonder at thirty-five—an age when athletes in most other branches of sport are far beyond their prime."

Wright contends that a heavyweight crew is superior to a boatload of light men—in contrast with the generally accepted theory.

"In rowing, strength counts just as much as it does in boxing and wrestling," he says. "A big pugilist usually can whip a smaller one and the big wrestler usually downs a rival inferior in size and strength.

'So it is with rowing. Give me a boatload of giants and I'll beat any crew of small men even though it is supposed that big men are so cramped in a light racing shell that they can't give full play to their muscles."

Carpentier Coming, But Not to Box, Says Carey

New York, July 14.—Jake Carey, a Rochester promoter who has been in France directing athletics for the Knights of Columbus, is back home with interesting sporting news for American fans. He declares that next Fall there is going to be an invasion of French boxers. Five and possibly six stars are coming here. They are Criqui, the bantam; Vitte and Marcel Denis, lightweights; Bora, a featherweight, and De Ponthieu, another featherweight, who has been here once before.

PLAY FOR JUNIOR GOLF TITLE STARTS WEDNESDAY

The junior title event of the Massachusetts Golf Association will start Wednesday at the Country Club. It will be continued on Thursday and Friday.

Three youngsters stand out prominently as coming championship possibilities. These are: The present champion, Nathaniel T. Lovell of Brae-Burn; Eddie Lowery of Woodland, and Roger S. Phillips of Chestnut Hill. "Nat" Lovell is eighteen and barely qualifies for the junior meeting, but Phillips is only seventeen and Lowery sixteen years of age. Lovell and Phillips qualified in the State amateur championship at Winchester last week, while Lowery missed doing so by two strokes. They are a well-matched trio, Lovell having a trifle the "edge," perhaps, on the basis of their play the last few weeks.

RED AND WHITE HOSE MEET IN FINAL GAME

Chicago, July 14—Jones and Williams were the opposing slabmen in the final game between the Red and White Hose on Comiskey Park today. Incidentally it may be the last performance of the former for the Boston club.

Jones was the main subject of conversation at a long conference between Managers Ed Barrow and Bill Gleason. This much is admitted by both sides but neither boss will say how far negotiations have progressed.

"We certainly would like to get another pitcher," is the extent of the information given out by Secretary Harry Grabiner of the White Sox, who is sitting on the lid while President Charles A. Comiskey is up in the Wisconsin woods searching for some health.

The Chicago team offered a fabulous sum for an Athletic pitcher, but Connie declined. He wanted players and the Sox have no men they do not need. It is understood that Barrow also wanted more than cash, so that is what is blocking the deal.

DEFEAT UP TO SHANNON.

You can charge young Mr. Shannon with Sunday's defeat and not be very far in error. He gummed things up in the first inning and provided Chicago with a four-run lead, after which the hard hitting White Sox went forth and played slap stick baseball and added to the count.

E. Collins beat out a hit to Shannon in the opener and Weaver hit a slow one in the same direction. Shannon got the ball just before Collins arrived in his neighborhood. Collins stopped short. Shannon hesitated when he could have had a double play if he had run Collins back toward first base. Finally he threw, but the ball reached McInnis too late to get Weaver, and Collins returned his way toward second. The side should have been retired right here, but it was not. Jackson and Gandil bumped Mays for singles and McMullin unloaded a triple.

QUESTION OF TIME.

After that the game was only a question of nine innings, with the Red Sox never having a look in. The Red Sox did manage to get nine hits and as many runs in the sixth and seventh, causing Faber to go hence, but they were too far behind to benefit except to boost their batting averages.

Pitcher Mays was put out of the game by a queer stunt. In the second inning Collins started to steal and Schang threw towards second. Mays turned around to see what would happen and the ball stung him on the neck. Collins was too busy sliding to get an extra base. Mays lasted long enough to bat in the third and make a hit, after which he went home. He was not hurt seriously.

THREE RUNS ON A SINGLE.

Chicago performed a unique feat in the fifth when three runs happened on one single. Dumont was wild and had walked E. Collins, which forced in a tally. Two men were out and the call was three and two when Weaver singled sharply to centre. All the three White Sox runners were going as rapidly as possible, including Ed Collins. He skidded over the plate just before Weaver was retired at second, trying to get an extra base on the throw-in.

The final score was White Sox 14, Red Sox 9.

How to Play Baseball

THIS is the forty-third of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated baseball expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton continues to tell how to become a pitcher. These articles will be a feature of the American's sport pages each day. Don't miss them.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

Angle pitching is far more effective than curve pitching, is less strain on the arm, and is the ideal delivery if the pitcher can secure control of his cross fire ball. As a steady diet in pitching it yields better results than any one style, and when mixed with curves makes a pitcher great.

No matter how good your curve ball may be it is not advisable to pitch it often. The strain on the arm is too great, and the rule is that the less frequently a curve is used the more effective it is.

The cross-fire in pitching makes the curve more effective, for it is merely a fast ball thrown at an angle. The pitcher grips the ball exactly as he does his fast ball, steps far to the right if a right-hander, and throws with a side arm motion back across the plate. The motion is extremely deceptive and creates the impression on the mind of the batter that a curve is being pitched.

THE PITCHER STEPS FAR TO THE RIGHT DIRECTION OF PLATE

The ball should never be thrown directly over the centre of the plate, but should be aimed at the outside corners. The pitcher may also practice stepping toward the left as far as possible and shooting the ball back across the inside corner of the plate from that angle. This motion adds to the size of the "break" on a side arm fast ball, and the break added to the angle makes it difficult to pitch.

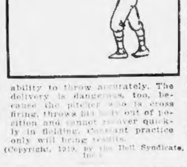
Again, the motion aids in the deception of the batsman's eye, for he unconsciously leans forward as the pitcher steps in that direction, and when the ball shoots back across the inner corner of the plate he is either too far overbalanced to do more than draw back or he hits the ball on the handle of the bat.

The "cross fire" is more effectually used by left-handers than by right handers, and is particularly deadly against left-handed batters when properly delivered.

Besides cross firing pitchers should practice pitching high and low at angles. Angling the ball downward when the arm is swung high and directly overhand is effective. A ball so delivered, aimed at knee heighth angles downward more than five feet in fifty, and, if thrown with great speed, will "straighten out" in the last ten feet.

Pitching as straight underhand as possible, with the ball gripped as for a fast ball, and aimed at the batter's shoulders is one of the most difficult forms of delivery to hit. It is rendered more effective if by checking the force of the ball with a heavy finger grip at the moment of its release, it can be caused to lose force in the last third of its journey and "fade" downward.

Remember that angle pitching should be attempted only after perfect control is attained. Practice stepping in both directions while pitching, first one way, then the other, until certain of ability to throw accurately. The delivery is dangerous, too, because the pitcher who is cross firing, throws his body out of position and cannot recover quickly in fielding. Constant practice only will bring results.



THE BATTER UNCONSCIOUSLY LEANS FORWARD AS THE PITCHER STEPS IN THAT DIRECTION

MITCHELL STILL HAS HOPES OF WINNING

By NICK FLATLEY.

The Braves and Cubs start a perfectly good baseball week today with a single game at the Home of Large Stretches. There remain three more tilts in the series, and they promise to be just as hard fought and sparkling as was Saturday's initial pastime.

Those Cubs are fighting hard to get up closer to the real going, while the Braves are struggling to pass the Cardinals, who hold forth in sixth place a mere matter of a game and a half ahead.

Fred Mitchell, of the invaders, refuses to be discouraged. He hasn't been having a bit of luck, but he expects it any old time now. His best pitching bet, in fact, the league's, has been sitting on the side lines for the matter of a couple of weeks, just after showing that his million dollar wing possessed as much cunning as it did before Grover Cleveland Alexander started chucking bombs at Heinies, who crowded the plate too much.

ALEX TO PITCH HERE.

Aleck's arm was wrenched, but has yielded to treatment, and the king will appear in one of the games here. Then, too, George Tyler has been out of it practically all year. The Cubs, one should say, have done well to stick as close to the running as they have, with two of the best hurlers in the business looking on.

"I have a good ball club," declared Fred Mitchell this a. m., "but it just will not get going. But it's got to start some time, and we're hoping it will be soon. Getting rid of my job as president gives me more time to think baseball, and maybe that will help some, too. That double-header job was entirely too much."

SCOUT TRADE RUMOR.

Both Mitchell and Stallings scout the idea of the big trade rumored from New York. The pilots are convinced that Davey Robertson has quit the game for good. Even if he hasn't, there's hardly a chance in the world that he would be shunted around via Herzog and Paskert and Mann et al. We have the hunch that if Davey does come back at all the Braves will be the club to get him.

Besides, Herzog is going too well now to be shifted. It's a fact that several bids have been made for him and turned down by the Brave boss. With Maranville and Herzog surrounding second base as they are now the Tribe has the best combination in the business.

Despite the fact that the local teams have not been winning with a great deal of consistency, fairly good crowds have been turning out every day, sufficiently large to show that this part of the world would have had a banner year if the local clubs were in the races, at all.

HIGH COST HITS GAME.

And baseball, like everything else, has been badly smacked by the high cost of everything. F'rinstance, a fan who goes up and makes all the payments a dyed-in-the-wooler does, waves farewell to a two dollar note. Tabulated, his expenses are something as follows:

Carfare, 10 cents each way	$ .20
Ticket plus war tax	.85
Peanuts, not many	.10
2 cigars	.25
Hot dog	.10
2 bottles pop	.30

MURCH IS MADE K. OF C. SPORT DIRECTOR

Newport, R. I., July 14.—Simeon A. Murch of Roxbury, former professional baseball player and athletic director of the University of Middlebury, Vermont, took over this week the directorship of all Knights of Columbus athletic activities in Newport and the surrounding naval and army centres. Director Murch reported this week to General Secretary Thomas J. Grady.

Director Murch was selected for the post by Daniel J. Sullivan, director of K. of C. activities in the Eastern-Northeastern Department, whose headquarters are at No. 204 Berkeley street, Boston, as the result of successful work accomplished for the Knights of Columbus in Chatham, Mass., and Newport News, Va., where he was K. of C. port athletic director. He played with St. Louis and Brooklyn in the National League, the American Association and the New England League. He is one of the six men who, in the history of baseball, successfully completed an unassisted triple play.

LYNN CREWS TO RACE FOR CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

A race for the Bennett cup, emblematic of the championship of Lynn, is to be held in Lynn harbor Saturday between the Farragut and West Lynn Boat Club crews. The senior eight-oared race for the Bergen cup will be held on the third Saturday in August.

Newton A. A. Beaten

Woonsocket, R. I., July 14.—The Woonsocket Crescents had just enough edge on the Newton A. A. team to put over the winning run in the tenth and take the game, 6 to 5. Nichols held the visitors to nine hits, while Woonsocket reached Russell for 13.

THREE PITCHERS KEEP GIANTS IN RACE

New York, July 14—The hard and timely hitting of the Giants and the work of three pitchers, Barnes, Causey, and Benton, have been the leading factors in keeping the Giants in the pennant race thus far this season.

The terrific batting of Young, Kauff and Burns especially has been a big aid to the team in the flag fight. Young and Kauff are among the first five batsmen of the league and Burns is close behind them. Doyle has also been playing a strong game both at the bat and in the field.

Between them Barnes, Causey, and Benton have pitched no less than forty-two of the sixty-six games which the Giants had played up to Saturday. They have stood up well under the brunt of the work, and Friday's game against St. Louis showed that Barnes, who has pitched sixteen games this season, has not suffered from the extra work. Of these games Barnes has won twelve and lost four. Causey has won nine and lost three, while Benton has won nine and lost five.

To these three pitchers goes the credit of keeping New York in the pacemaker's position in the race. That these three boxmen could keep up their good work and land the Giants in front at the end of the season, of course is too much to expect. Dubuc and Toney should be able to help out for Toney already has won six games and lost two, while Dubuc had four victories to his credit and one defeat. If these five pitchers were able to go along, each taking his regular turn, Manager McGraw would not have so much to worry about.

HARDEST HITTING CLUB.

New York is easily the hardest hitting club in the league this season. The Giants lead in team batting with a batting average of .277, while Cincinnati and Brooklyn come next, being tied for second place with .269. The New York players have come up to early season expectations at the bat with the exception of Hal Chase, who has not yet reached the mark which should be his at this season of the year. Chase is hitting at a .262 clip and his progress has been slow. It may be that as the season progresses he will flash the batting form he has shown in other seasons.

Young, Kauff, Burns and Doyle are all hitting above .300, and this quartet more than makes up for the falling off of some of the other players. Jess Barnes is one of the best batsmen among the league's pitchers, and now has an average of .281. Lew McCarty has a batting average of .295, while Arthur Fletcher is hitting at a [illegible] pace. Zimmerman is not hitting [illegible] his best form, and before the season is over Heinie should be at a far better mark than his present figure, .253.

Mike Gonzales, the Cuban catcher, has not yet showed the kind of batting of which he is capable, and undoubtedly there will be a big improvement in his batting as the season wears along. Dubuc is another of the pitchers who has value as a batsman, and the team as a whole is a well-rounded out hitting combination.

GIANTS VS. WESTERN RIVALS.

In their first swing around the Western circuit, the Giants just about held their own. They will have to do better than that with the Western clubs during the present [illegible] at the Polo grounds to be able to go West again at the head of the procession.

The failure of Pol Perritt and Schupp to round into pitching form has disarranged the plans of Manager McGraw. He has figured from the start of the season on these two boxmen getting into shape. If these pitchers were able to help out occasionally, and take some of the burden off Causey, Barnes and Benton, the flinging situation would be vastly improved. Toney is sure to be a big factor in the pennant fight from now on, and Dubuc may also be able to do his share.

Records of Week in Major Leagues

The week's record in each league of games played, won and lost, with runs, hits, errors, men left on bases and runs scored by opponents, including games of Saturday, July 12, is as follows:

BRAVES BLANK SCHENCK TEAM, 9 TO 0

Meriden, Ct., July 14.—The Braves defeated the Schenck semi-professional nine of this city, which was completely outclassed, 9 to 0. Two thousand people at Hanover Park saw the uneven battle, and did their best to cheer on the locals.

Barron, the Schenck pitcher, held the Braves to nine hits, and deserved better support. Seven errors tell how the field supported him, due principally to stage fright. Fillingim was hit safely five times by the Schencks. The feature was a running one-handed catch by McGorrity of a hot liner from Maranville's bat. The score:

Braves .... 4 0 0 0 5 0 0 0 0—9 14 0

SPECIAL POLO TRYOUT MATCH ON JULY 26

Hempstead, L. I., July 14.—There is enthusiasm among the polo men of the East over the fact that another international match with England is now an assured fact. Plans were perfected at Meadowbrook today for a special match on July 26 on International Field. It will be in the nature of a tryout to determine what players and substitutes will be sent to England next year to play at Hurlingham in an effort to regain the international cup that was taken back to England by a team sponsored by Lord Wimborne in 1914.

MANY NEW GOLF STARS BEING DEVELOPED

By FRANCIS OUIMET.

The Massachusetts amateur golf championship at Winchester, which I had the good fortune to win, has proven one thing and that is the Massachusetts district has many young stars coming along.

In the first place we have that star of stars, Freddy Wright. He has arrived and has come to stay and will no doubt be winning championships for years to come.

Then there is Roger Phillips, a school boy athlete and a fine golfer. This boy is a real gamester and I am not going to say he will bear watching, but he is coming along so fast that he will soon be one of Massachusetts Lesley cup representatives. A little brushing up on his mashie shots and irons and he will be a real top notcher.

Another youth that is a great player is Nat Lovell. This boy is endowed with as graceful a golf swing as I have ever seen. Unlike most youngsters he hits his irons in that sharp, crisp way that our British cousins excel in. All this youngster needs is a bit more tournament experience and Roger Phillips as well and in these two boys Massachusetts has two real stars.

A. Perley Chase certainly has proven his class by his defeat of Tom Claflin, the medallist. He is such a determined fellow that a little practice on iron shots will reduce his handicap considerably. As it is now I believe he is higher than he should be.

All in all it looks like a great year for Massachusetts men. All the old boys—Tom Claflin, Bill Chick, Jack Sullivan, etc., are back on their game and when the intercity matches come along we should more than hold our own. Great praise is due the Winchester Country Club and their splendid professional, Harry Bowler, for the grand condition of the course and the splendid way the tournament was conducted. It was easily the most successful event yet held.

SUMMER ATHLETICS PLANNED FOR EXETER

Exeter, N. H., July 14.—Organization of athletic teams among the students attending the Summer school here is being effected by Oscar W. Pearson, assistant gymnasium instructor. Stress is being put upon baseball, and a schedule of games with amateur nines in this vicinity is being arranged.

The Summer Stars at Their Best

THE Winter constellations are more gem-like in brilliancy, but those that occupy the sky in mid-July have a richer effect because they are set off by the Milky Way as by a baldric. Notice, one of these nights, how the great "river of stars" runs from the northern to the southern horizon.

HEARTS OF THREE

Jack London's Last Novel

STIRRING TALE OF HUNT FOR PIRATES' GOLD

Young New York Millionaire, Lured by Tales of a Central American Adventurer, Sets Sail on a Most Thrilling Cruise

The theme of this story was suggested to the author by Charles W. Goddard

"I'LL run around right away!" Francis said, reaching for his hat, while his face lighted up with hope. "He was an old friend of father's, and if anybody could pull me through, he could."

"Don't be too sure," Bascom shook his head and paused reluctantly a moment before making confession. "I called him up just before you returned from Panama. I was very frank. I told him of your absence and of your perilous situation here, and—ah, yes, flatly and flat out—asked him if I could rely on him in case of need. And he baffled. You know anybody can baffle when asked a favor. That was all right. But I thought I sensed more—no, I won't dare to say enmity; but I will say that I was impressed—how shall I say? Well, that he struck me as being particularly cold-blooded and noncommittal."

"Nonsense," Francis laughed. "He was too good a friend of my father's."

A Little Information

"Ever heard of Cosmopolitan Railways merger?" Bascom queried with significant irrelevance.

Francis nodded promptly, then said:

"But that was before my time. I merely heard of it, that's all. Shoot, tell me about it. Give me the weight of your mind."

"Too long a story, but take this one word of advice. If you see Regan don't put your cards on the table. Let him offer without solicitation from you. Of course, I may be all wrong, but it won't damage you to hold up your hand and get his play first."

At the end of another half hour Francis was closeted with Regan, and the stress of his peril was such that he controlled his natural impulses, remembered Bascom's instruction, and was quite fairly nonchalant about the state of his affairs. He even bluffed.

"In pretty deep, eh?" was Regan's beginning.

"Oh, not so deep that my back teeth are awash yet," Francis replied airily. "I can still breathe, and it will be a long time before I begin swallowing."

Regan did not immediately reply. Instead, pregnantly, he ran over the last few yards of the ticker tape.

"You're dumping Tampico Pet pretty heavily, just the same."

"And they're snapping it up," Francis came back, and for the first time, in a maze of wonderment, he considered the possibility of Bascom's intuition being right. "Sure, I've got them swallowing."

"Just the same, you'll note that Tampico Pet is tumbling at the same time it's being snapped up, which is a very curious phenomenon," Regan urged.

"In a bear market all sorts of curious phenomena occur," Francis bluffed with a mature show of wisdom. "And when they've swallowed enough of my dumpings, they'll be ripe to roll on a barrel. Somebody will pay something to get my dumpings out of their system. I fancy they'll pay through the nose before I'm done with them."

"But you're all in, eh? I've been watching your fight, even before your return. Tampico Pet is your last."

Francis shook his head.

"I'd scarcely say that," he lied. "I've got assets my market enemies never dream of. I'm luring them on, that's all; just luring them on. Of course, Regan, I'm telling you this in confidence. You were my father's friend. Mine is going to be some clear-up, and if you'll take my tip, in this short market you start buying. You'll be sure to settle with the sellers long in the end."

A Bit of Mystery

"What are your assets?"

Francis shrugged his shoulders.

"That's what they are going to fan out when they're full up with my stuff."

"It's a bluff!" Regan admired explosively. "You've got the old man's nerve all right. But you've got to show me it isn't a bluff."

Regan waited, and Francis was suddenly inspired.

"It is," he muttered. "You've named it. I'm drowning over my back teeth now, and they're the biggest sea of the wash. But I won't drown if you will help me. All you've got to do is to remember my father and put out your hand to save his son. If you'll back me up we'll make them all sick. . . ."

And right there the Wolf of Wall Street showed his teeth. He pointed to Richard Henry Morgan's picture.

"Why do you think I kept that hanging on the wall these years?" he demanded.

Francis nodded as if the one accepted explanation was their tried and ancient friendship.

"Guess again!" Regan sneered grimly.

Francis shook his head in perplexity.

"So I shouldn't never forget him," the Wolf went on. "And never a waking moment have I forgotten him. Remember the Cosmopolitan Railways Merger? Well, old R. H. M. double-crossed me in that deal. And it was some double-cross, believe me. But he was too cunning ever to let me get a come-back on him. So there his picture was hung, and here I've sat and waited. And now the time has come."

"You mean?" Francis queried quietly.

"Just that," Regan snarled. "I've waited and worked for this day, and the day has come. I've got the whelp where I want him at any rate." He glanced up maliciously at the picture. "And if that don't make the old gent turn in his grave. . . ."

Francis rose to his feet and regarded his enemy curiously.

"No," he said, as if in soliloquy, "it isn't worth it."

"What isn't worth what?" the other demanded with swift suspicion.

"Beating you up," was the cool answer. "I could kill you with my hands in five minutes. You're no wolf. You're just mere yellow dog, the part of you that isn't plain skunk. They told me to expect this of you; but I didn't believe, and I come to see. They were right. You were all that they said. Well, I must get along out of this. It smells like a den of foxes."

He paused with his hand on the door knob and looked back. He had not succeeded in making Regan lose his temper.

"And what are you going to do about it?" the latter jeered.

"If you'll permit me to get my broker on your 'phone maybe you'll learn," Francis replied.

"Go to it," my laddy buck," Regan conceded, then, with a wave of suspicion—"I'll get him for you myself."

And, having ascertained that Bascom was really at the other end of the line, he turned the receiver over to Francis.

Straight From the Shoulder

"You were right," the latter assured Bascom. "Regan's all you said and worse. Go right on with our plan of campaign. We've got him where we want him, though the old fox won't believe it for a moment. He thinks he's going to strip me, clean me out." Francis paused to think up the strongest way of carrying on his bluff, then continued: "I'll tell you something you don't know. He's the one who manoeuvred the raid from the beginning. So now you know whom we're going to bury."

And after a little more of similar talk he hung up.

"You see," he explained, again from the door, "you were so crafty that we couldn't make out who it was. Why, Regan, we were prepared to give a walloping to some unknown that had several times your strength. And now that it's you, it's easy. We were prepared to strain. But with you it will be a walkover. Tomorrow, around this time, there's going to be a funeral right here in your office, and you're not going to be one of the mourners. You're going to be the corpse—and a nice-looking financial corpse you'll be when we get done with you."

"The dead spit of R. H. M.," the Wolf grinned. "Lord, how he could pull off a bluff!"

"It's a pity he didn't bury you and save me all the trouble," was Francis' parting shot.

"And all the expense," Regan flung after him. "It's going to be pretty expensive for you, and there isn't going to be any funeral from this place."

"Well, tomorrow is the day!" Francis delivered to Bascom as they parted that evening. "This time tomorrow I'll be a perfectly nice scalped and skinned and sun-dried and smoke-cured specimen for Regan's private collection. But who'd have believed the old skunk had it in for me? I never harmed him. On the contrary, I always considered him father's best friend. If Charley Tippery could only come through with some of the Tippery surplus coin. . . ."

"Or if the United States would only declare a moratorium," Bascom hoped, equally hopeless.

And Regan, at that moment, was saying to his assembled agents and rumor-factory specialists:

"Sell! Sell! Sell all you've got and then sell short! I see no bottom to this market!"

And Francis, on his way up town, buying the last extra, scanned the five-inch-lettered headline:

"I SEE NO BOTTOM TO THIS MARKET. THOMAS REGAN."

But Francis was not at his house at 8 next morning to meet Charley Tippery. It had been a night in which official Washington had slept, and the night-wires had carried the news out over the land that the United States, though not at war, had declared its moratorium. Wakened out of his bed at 7 by Bascom in person, who brought the news, Francis had accompanied him down town. The moratorium had given them hope, and there was much to do.

Barring the Way

Charles Tippery, however, was not the first to arrive at the Morgan palace. A few minutes before eight, Parker was very much disturbed and perturbed when Henry and Leoncia, much the worse for sunburn and travel stain, brushed past the second butler who had opened the door.

"It's no use you're coming in this way," Parker assured them. "Mr. Morgan is not at home."

"Where's he gone?" Henry demanded, shifting the suitcase he carried to the other hand. "We've got to see him pronto, and I'll have you know that pronto means quick. And who are you?"

"I am Mr. Morgan's confidential valet," Parker answered solemnly. "And who are you?"

"My name's Morgan," Henry answered shortly, looking about in quest of something, striding to the library, glancing in and discovering the telephones. "Where's Francis? With what number can I call him up?"

"Mr. Morgan left express instructions that nobody was to telephone him except on important business."

"Well, my business is important. What's the number?"

"Mr. Morgan is very busy today," Parker reiterated stubbornly.

"He's in a pretty bad way, eh?" Henry quizzed.

The valet's face remained expressionless.

"Looks as though he was going to be cleaned out today, eh?"

Parker's face betrayed neither emotion nor intelligence.

"For a second time I tell you he is very busy——" he began.

"Oh, come!" Henry interrupted. "It's no secret. The market's got him where the hair is short. Everybody knows that. A lot of it was in the morning papers. Now come across, Mr. Confidential Valet. I want his number. I've got important business with him myself."

But Parker remained obdurate.

"What's his lawyer's name? Or the name of his agent? Or of any of his representatives?"

Parker shook his head.

"If you will tell me the nature of your business with him," the valet essayed.

Henry dropped the suitcase and made as if about to leap upon the other and shake Francis' number out of him. But Leoncia intervened.

"Tell him," she said.

Showing Him

"Tell him!" Henry shouted, accepting her suggestion. "I'll do better than that. I'll show him. Here, come on, you!" He strode into the library, swung the suitcase on the reading table and began opening it. "Listen to me, Mr. Confidential Valet. We're going to save Francis Morgan. We're going to pull him out of the hole. We've got millions for him right here inside of this thing."

Parker, who had been looking on with cold, disapproving eyes, recoiled in alarm at the last words.

Foolish Things Women Do

Some women put ammonia in the water when washing their hair. This not only turns the hair grey, but has a deadly effect upon the hair roots. It makes the hair thin and lifeless. Any tonic or invigorator containing alcohol is also dangerous. Most soaps and shampoos contain too much alkali, and people who use them run the risk and danger of losing their hair. The best thing to use is a fine neutral soap, combined with Glycerin, Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs and Salicylic Acid. These are the ingredients of Birt's Head Wash, which is an absolutely reliable preparation, because it does not contain any ammonia, alcohol or free alkali. It makes the hair soft and glossy, and removes scales and dandruff, the cause of most hair troubles.

When a Girl Marries

By ANN LISLE

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

CHAPTER CXLII.

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"YOU'VE found her!" murmured Terry in a voice that crumpled a little around the edges.

But the crumpled voice righted itself into a clear, quiet tone that clamped the lid down on the boyish shout Terry probably wanted to give.

"Come on—let's go to her. She's all right, you say? Great! Wonderful! You found little sister Anne. I knew I could count on you. Where is she? Why did she run away? Does she want to see me? She's all right, you say."

"Where'd you blow from, Terry, old son?" broke in Jim's voice, jovially; for Jim never gets so deeply absorbed in himself that he cannot respond to the sheer, big, fine lovableness of Terry Winston.

"A late train from Washington," replied Terry. "When I couldn't find you I tried the Sturges girl and Tony and Vee. But this seemed everyone's night out. So—on the off chance that you'd blow in for a bit of sleep, I camped down here. May I come up and hear about Betty?"

"Up you go, lad," said Jim with the warm, sweet smile that wins him the love other men have to work for.

Terry fidgeted his way into the elevator and across our livingroom. I kept thinking what a lot of good it would do him to throw up his cap with a wild hurrah or two, for no tea-kettle would be expected to stay serene with its spout corked up. Still Terry manages, somehow, without letting off steam.

"Tell me," he said in a voice so low and tense that I only knew what he said because I knew he'd say it.

He Reads the Note

I gave him Betty's note. His eyes galloped over it—then slowed down and reread it.

"You might tell me," said Jim with sudden interest as he lighted a cigarette and offered Terry the same service.

Terry shook his head, looked at me for permission and read Betty's note aloud. Then he tucked it into his blouse. I could have hugged him for the quiet way he took possession of it.

"Now the rest of the story, please, little sister," he said quietly.

So I explained to him how Virginia had sent for Anthony Norreys, and how he had stimulated my memory by questioning Virginia about where she first met Betty. Then I told of my recollection of my own first meeting with Betty at our honeymoon tea of Miss Moss, and how through her we had traced Betty to Greyfriars Hall.

As I began to speak I turned my eyes from Terry to Jim because it seemed indecent to watch the utter devotion in Terry Winston's eyes—remembering how he had written that if only I'd find Betty safe and well he'd be willing to stand the "gaff" if she sent him about his business. I couldn't stare at the great love speaking through Terry's eyes while I wondered—wondered what Betty would do with that love. So I turned to Jim.

An amazing set of emotions was working its way across his face. He had a look of startled admiration, and he interrupted me once to exclaim:

"Well, of all things. Betty loves you! And she asks me to remember that you're a delicate, gentle little princess. Betty recommending you to my mercy."

A New Surprise

Later his amazement took a new form:

"Terry, what do you think of our little Sherlockina Holmes. . . . Our Anne getting on the track of the little Moss?"

"Anne's a wonder. You always knew it," replied Terry, looking at Jim inscrutably for a second, and then beginning again the striding up and down the room with which he had punctuated the greater part of my story.

Jim looked more amazed than ever, and rather proud of the "treasure" (!) he had discovered for himself.

Suddenly Terry's strides crystallized into the need of striding somewhere—nearer Betty.

"Let's call up Information and see when the next train goes."

"I'll do that," volunteered Jim.

Then I had to tell parts of the story over again to Terry and to assure him all over again that I felt certain Betty was all right. And after a five-minute struggle with the railroad Information Jim reported that the first train for the stop nearest to Greyfriars Hall left at eleven-ten the next morning and arrived at two-forty—that it was met by the bus from the Hall in time to get us there at about half-past three.

Terry actually groaned.

"Your railroads! And of all the blooming bad luck my car's clean out of commission. We'll have to see about hiring one at once."

"Oh, that's all right!" I cried. "Anthony Norreys' car is to be in readiness. We were just waiting to hear from you."

"Good old Tony!" beamed Terry. "I'll be off, then, and let you folks get some sleep."

So he said good-night and left us.

"And now to bed," I murmured, sleepily.

"And now—to talk about your friend, Anthony Norreys!" said Jim. His eyes frightened me.

Teach the Child to Shop

LET DAUGHTER BUY FOR THE TABLE

By Loretto C. Lynch

"I'M not really able," sighed Mrs. Martin, as she lifted herself up on her elbow and attempted to get out of bed.

"But why do you get up when the doctor left orders for you to remain in bed at least two days longer?"

Mrs. Martin smiled. "Ah," she said, "tomorrow is Sunday and I have nothing in the house to eat and poor little Mary doesn't know how to buy a thing."

Poor little Mary was about fourteen. And yet it was no fault of Mary's that she could not make purchases. For her mother never allowed her to make a decision in anything fearing she might choose unwisely. But who amongst us has ever profited except by experience? And the best experience in the world is gained by profiting by our own mistakes.

Yet this same lady will some day allow little Mary to step out into a world of her very own where judgment must be exercised, and when Mary fails in the world, the world will blame Mary.

"I'd love to go," remarked a woman in her late twenties to her newly found friend. "But you see, my dear, I need a new suit and mother has been so busy since sister Anne has been ill she simply hasn't time to go with me and select a suit for me," she added.

Yet this is not altogether the girl's fault. Her mother has probably allowed the girl to depend upon her so long, or the mother may have dominated her in choice to such an extent that she is quite helpless.

Rich or poor, every girl should have some training in purchasing. Do you let your daughter plan and purchase any of the meals? Suppose you let your daughter plan and purchase some of the meals while school is closed this summer. Let her start with breakfast. Suppose you let her start with a simple menu, such as apple sauce, rice with milk, baker's rolls with butter, coffee.

Instruct your daughter to look over the stock on hand before making out the market list. See if there is butter and milk in sufficient quantity in the refrigerator. See if the pantry contains apples and rice, salt and sugar, coffee and rolls in sufficient quantity.

Suppose there are no apples or rice. These will have to be purchased. At the shop, daughter will find dried apples, canned apples and fresh apples. For use in apple sauce, dried or canned apples are quite as satisfactory as fresh ones and decidedly cheaper, except perhaps in apple season in an apple growing country.

A few hints on buying rice might help. Tell daughter of the different varieties of rice on the market and the manner in which they are presented to the consumer. For instance, there is polished and unpolished rice, cultivated and wild rice, whole rice and broken rice.

It is better to make a market list no matter how experienced one may be. Things forgotten at market are the bugbear of housekeepers. Visiting several shops and markets and comparing prices is also a good exercise for the young girl learning to buy.

Of course, at first she will make mistakes, but the experience will be most profitable and in any event it will be of educational value.

Drink

Coca-Cola

DELICIOUS and REFRESHING

You smack your lips over it, because you like its taste, its quality, its genuine gratification. It satisfies thirst.

Nobody has ever been able to successfully imitate it, because its quality is indelibly registered in the taste of the American public.

Demand the genuine by full name — nicknames encourage substitution.

Stocks Higher in New York at Noon; Boston Market Strong, With Coppers Leading

COPPER SHARES SELL HERE AT ADVANCES

Amoskeag an Early Feature for Strength on the Home Bourse

The Boston market was strong during the morning, opening firm and maintaining its good tone subsequently. Amoskeag was the feature at the start, advancing five points to 145, its highest record price on the first transaction. It was an odd lot sale. Warren Brothers began three points higher at 52, also a record high. The third record high chronicled at the opening was by Davis Daly. It advanced a fraction.

Coppers were strong as a class, four selling at their year's highest during the morning. They were East Butte, Calumet and Arizona, Mohawk and Copper Range.

Gray and Davis was active and before noon had sold at more than a point advance. Mexican Investments, Pacific Mills, Osceola and American Zinc were also strong.

Boston Elevated was weak, declining on reports of dwindling passenger receipts. United Fruit sold off a point during the morning, while Swift & Co. was fractionally lower.

President C. F. Kelley of Anaconda, now in Boston conferring with labor representatives, thinks copper will sell at 25 cents a pound before long.

BIG GAINS BY NUMBER OF ISSUES

Stutz Motor, Bosch Magneto, Baldwin and Crucible Conspicuous for Strength

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were higher in New York at noon and, although gains were small on the average, a number of issues were notable for large advances. Among them were Stutz Motor, American Bosch Magneto, Crucible, Baldwin, Lorillard, Colorado Fuel, International Harvester and Keystone Tire. They showed from two to eight points gain at their morning highest.

Issues to sell at record highest prices during the forenoon included Crucible, Pan-American, American Bosch Magneto and Virginia Carolina Chemical. Highest prices for the year were reached by Anaconda, Inspiration, Chino, Chile and Baldwin. By 12 o'clock prices were at about the highest level.

U. S. Steel was up ¾ at 114¼, its morning range having been 113⅝ to 114⅜.

The market was active.

MARKET FIRM AT OPENING.

The market had a firm opening, with most issues showing small gains. There was good demand but considerable supply also. Some commission houses representing large interests continued the selling movement which began last week, but there was no cessation of buying by the public. Before the end of the first hour prices averaged a little lower, the market bordering in irregularity. Crucible was strong, opening with nearly three points gain and at a highest record price. United Cigar Stores was weak at the start and during the first hour. Most price changes were fractional. Ajax Rubber was notably strong. Denver & Rio Grande preferred began with a good gain but lost it all and more. Reading was strong among rails. As groups neither oils, motors nor steels had a definite trend. Coppers were higher as a class, several selling at their year's highest. Shipping issues had a recessional tendency.

LOVETT AGAINST RAIL PLAN.

Robert S. Lovett, president of the Union Pacific system, has expressed to Congress his opposition to the consolidation of railroads into a few large systems. This had been suggested in settlement of the rail problem. He thinks it would impair the credit of strong roads instead of improving the credit of weak ones. He also believes that the consolidated companies will be too large and unwieldy for efficient and economical management. He says:

"Congress has no right to compel one railroad to consolidate with another. It may give one the right to acquire the property of the other by condemnation, but it must pay for it, and—here is the difficulty—pay for it in cash.

"The underwriting of a fabulous amount must be provided. Will Congress appropriate the billions necessary? Have we bankers enough to provide the money except through a series of years? And what will happen to the financial welfare of the country in the meantime?

"I believe that the absorption of some of the weak lines by the strong lines, upon fair terms, should be promoted, but competition in service and facilities should not only be preserved, but should be extended."

President Lovett is opposed also to the plan of pooling net earnings by dividing roads into groups and establishing rate to yield 6 per cent. or some other specified return upon book value.

"The importance," he said, "of reestablishing railroad credit cannot be over-estimated, but, nevertheless, I am persuaded that no guarantee short of a return upon the full value of railroad property will be helpful to that end, and that a guarantee of full value is not practicable without government operation, which I regard as beyond present discussion."

GERMANY IN NEED OF AMERICAN COTTON

The high record prices attained by cotton options last week was in anticipation of the increased European demand which must result from Germany entering the market. Previous to the war Germans consumed about 3,000,000 bales of American cotton a year and were well stocked up before fighting began. But the blockade shut off their supply for several years and they had to resort to paper and other substitutes.

Germany may have trouble in obtaining credit for all the cotton needed, but if money is obtained there will still be difficulty in getting an adequate amount. It is figured that when it comes to filling both foreign and domestic demand this country's new crop and surplus from old will be about 1,500,000 bales short of requirements.

Building in New England

It is said that little has been done in the construction line in New England so far this year, but according to F. W. Dodge Co. statistics, building and engineering expenditures in this section for 1919 up to July 10 totaled $[illegible],964,000, while for the period in 1913, the year before the war, the total was $88,940,000.

Cotton Prices Declined Soon

New York, July 14.—At the opening cotton prices were two points lower on March and six to fifteen higher on other positions. Firm cables caused spot house buying on the call, but realizing caused net declines of 18 to 30 points. At the end of fifteen minutes quotations were about 23 to 30 points under Saturday's closing. Opening prices were: Oct., 35.26; Dec., 35.19; Jan., 35.00; March, 34.85; May, 34.80.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, July 14.—Opening prices on the Board of Trade were: Corn—July, 1.96¼; Sept., 1.97 to 1.96; Dec., 1.67¼ to 1.64. Oats—Sept., 79¼ to 79½; Dec., 82 to 81½.

COAL SHIPMENTS SHRINK; SHORTAGE THREATENED

The campaign to get householders to buy their coal early is based upon a situation which justifies all the urging to which consumers have been subjected. Shipments of anthracite for June were 92,324 tons less than for May this year and 1,248,078 tons less than for June, 1918. So many miners have left the Pennsylvania coal fields for Europe that a labor shortage is likely to curtail output and traffic conditions may make transportation of household fuel difficult later before the year-end.

Coal will be higher in price later and hard to obtain. The early buyer will be sure of having a full bin when cold weather sets in. All the anthracite mined during the first half of 1919 was approximately 10,000,000 tons less than the production for the first six months of 1918.

Highest Price for Hogs

When hogs sold in Chicago last week at $23 a hundredweight they touched the highest price ever paid for such quadruped. Pork and its products have climbed more than any other meat foods. The reason is the European shortage of fats, the high price for feed in this country and diminishing herds. It is believed by packers that pork prices are still well below the maximum they are destined to reach.

Boston Wool Shipments

Wool shipped from Boston from January 1 to July 10 this year inclusive totaled 70,661,600 pounds, compared with 115,604,185 for the like period in 1918, according to the Commercial Bulletin. Receipts for the 1919 period were 184,358,429 against 250,241,009 pounds for the preceding one.

Atchison Rail Earnings

For the fiscal year ended with May the net railway operating income of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway amounted to $35,089,056 against $44,206,339 for the preceding year. The decrease is $9,117,283. The net for common stock was $15,963,976, which is equal to $7.65 a share.

Dividend Declarations

Pittsburgh Steel Company declared regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on preferred, payable September 1 to stock of record August 15.

COPPER METAL SELLS AT 21 CENTS

Surplus Is Going and Mine President Predicts a Runaway Market

Copper metal at the week-end was quoted at 21 cents a pound, its high for 1919 to date and a 6½ cents advance from the low figure of March last. Sales at that price were reported and it was stated also that one large company, with headquarters in Boston, refused a large order for future delivery at that figure. It was predicted on Saturday that copper would sell above 26 cents a pound before the end of the year.

One mine president said: "We are going to have a runaway market in the metal. Before we know it the surplus will be cleaned up. When the mines try to enlarge production they will find a substantial increase practically impossible because of a labor shortage."

Twenty-six cents was the highest price for copper last year, it being fixed by the government. The average price for the metal for thirty years is 15.49 cents a pound. The highest price in about sixty years was 55 cents reached in 1864 and the lowest was 9.75, touched in 1894.

At the beginning of this year the copper surplus in this country and Europe was estimated to total from 1,500,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 pounds and mines began to curtail production. For weeks, if not for several months since this action, consumption has exceeded production, although less than the normal amount of metal has been used in manufacturing. No figures are at hand to give definitely the amount of refined copper now above ground, but in the trade it is believed it will not last long in a reconstruction era in which practically the whole world will have a hand.

The People Do Not Want the League of Nations

Recent Election in Minnesota of Great Significance

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

Just as the by-elections are going tremendously against David Lloyd George, the British Premier, since he betrayed his pre-election promises and has revealed, to the disgust of the British Liberals and workingmen, that Cloven Hoof of British imperialism, so the by-election in Minnesota went against the Democratic party last week.

This election in Minnesota is of great significance. For many years the particular congressional district in which this election was held was one of the banner Democratic districts of the country.

In 1916 Congressman Vandyke received more than 12,000 plurality, and even in 1918, a disastrous year for the Democrats, he carried it by a big plurality.

But recently in an election caused by his death the people of the district elected an independent and labor Republican.

The Democratic candidate, who appealed to the voters to support the Wilson policies and the League of Nations, received only 7,000 votes all told out of a total of 28,000 votes cast—that is to say, he received 4,000 less than the plurality which the Democratic candidate received in the last national election three years ago.

Let it be remembered that the issue was squarely drawn. A strong appeal was made to support the League of Nations and the treaty negotiated by President Wilson, and on that issue this Democratic district gives the Democratic candidate making such an appeal less than one-quarter of the vote of the district and 4,000 less votes than the plurality it gave the Democratic candidate three years ago.

The Hearst papers ventured the statement that if the advocates of the League of Nations dared to submit on a referendum to the voters of the country this abandonment of all the traditions that America has held dear and of all the principles for which we fought the war, it would be buried so deeply that every man who had anything to do with it would hang his head in shame.

Can You See Straight?

Would You Be Willing That Your Testimony About What You Saw Should Convict a Man?

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

The human eye and the human brain, working together often times achieve strange results.

Much more useful than an analysis of the blows struck at the fight in Toledo, which adds nothing to the sum of human existence, is a comparison of what the various onlookers saw or thought they saw.

What was the color of the umbrella that was hoisted over Dempsey when he first came into the ring?

A half dozen different observers saw that sunshade in a half dozen different colors. But maybe some of them were color blind.

Did Dempsey stand with his back to the ring until the call to battle had been sounded twice or did he stand glaring at Willard eagerly waiting the summons to conflict?

Two old and seasoned writers of pugilism totally disagree as to why the battle did not begin when the gong or the whistle or both first sounded.

Who struck the first blow? Was it a left lead landing lightly on the upper part of Dempsey's head or was it a smashing left to the champion's ribs?

You can read the accounts and get either record and believe whichever one suits you.

Who threw the towel or the sponge, whichever it was, into the ring and so gave the victory to the youthful battler?

There are three or four answers to this in the dispatches which were sent over the wires.

In themselves no one of these questions, nor all combined, are of the least moment.

But suppose that the life of a man depended upon the answers.

Suppose that the verdict of a jury was to be based on the testimony of the men who watched that fight, what sort of a chance would the defendant have of getting a just judgment?

And yet every one of these men were sent to Toledo because they are trained observers of things pugilistic. Many of them have seen hundreds of ring battles. Some of them have themselves been fighters and one or two had been champions. And yet no two saw the same things and put them down in agreement.

Of course, on the big result they all were in unison. Of the number of times that Willard was floored all but one or two agree, but as to the details there was hopeless confusion.

Very few men have well developed powers of observation.

A professor in one of the big universities tried the experiment of having a man strangely dressed walk through his classroom and then asked his students to write a description of what they had seen.

No two of the students agreed as to the height, weight, complexion, color of hair and details of dress. And only a small minority were approximately correct.

The power of observation, like the power of memory, needs to be exercised to have strength.

Most men go through the day without observing much of anything.

Their minds are aimless. They have eyes, but they see not.

It is a great misfortune.

There is so much in the world worth seeing, so much worth studying and thinking about that no man has a right to go blundering through life.

Teach yourself to be observant.

Train your eye to see correctly.

Be so certain of what you have seen that you can swear to it.

Correct eyesight and a mind that accurately registers what your eyes see may sometime be of inestimable use to you. It may save another man's life; it might be that it would save your own.

If this editorial has dragged out of a prize fight and into your mind a thought that will be useful and helpful, it has accomplished the almost impossible feat of getting something out of nothing, for prize fights are about as barren of things to think about as any-[illegible]ould well be.

By K. C. B.

Dear K. C. B.—I am in trouble, and as you seem to be adjuster of troubles and champion in general for every one from presidents to wrens, I'm sure you can help me out.

It's this way. I'm mother in general to a lot of girls. Three evenings ago I was at a neighborhood party where the young folks danced. Two perfectly respectable but painfully loud girls were followed by all the cavaliers, while the nice quiet girls either danced together or braced the walls.

One dainty little miss sat down beside me and, slipping her hand into mine, said:

"Why is it always so? Why is it that the frowsy head and rouged face attract them like moths to a candle? Hundreds of us would really like to know if it pays a girl to be ladylike."

What is your man's viewpoint of the matter?

A LOVER OF GIRLS.

DEAR MOTHER-in-General.
* * *
I ASKED my wife.
* * *
TO ANSWER your question.
* * *
AND GAVE her your letter.
* * *
AND WHEN she had read it.
* * *
SHE HANDED it back.
* * *
AND WAS going to say something.
* * *
AND JUST at that moment.
* * *
A GIRL went by.
* * *
AND SHE had red hair.
* * *
AND WAS dolled up so.
* * *
AND LOOKED so grand.
* * *
THAT I rose right up.
* * *
TO SEE her go by.
* * *
AND A moment later.
* * *
ANOTHER GIRL came.
* * *
IN A Summer dress.
* * *
AND I let her go by.
* * *
WITHOUT MOVING an inch.
* * *
AND WHATEVER'S the answer.
* * *
I'M HANGED if I know.
* * *
EXCEPT I do know.
* * *
THAT IF I was a girl.
* * *
LIKE THE nice little girl.
* * *
I'D NOT worry at all.
* * *
FOR SOONER or later.
* * *
THESE SAME silly boys.
* * *
WHO RUN after the girls.
* * *
WIT H THE frowsy heads.
* * *
WILL CEASE to be boys.
* * *
AND GROW into men.
* * *
AND START looking around.
* * *
FOR A nice little girl.
* * *
AND A nice little house.
* * *
AND THE frowsy haired girl.
* * *
WITH THE painted face.
* * *
WILL BEGIN to grow old.
* * *
AND SHE'LL find that the men.
* * *
WHOM SHE used to command.
* * *
HAVE ALL drifted away.
* * *
AND IT'S all just the same.
* * *
AS THE Great White Way.
* * *
WE LIKE to play there.
* * *
BUT WE all like to know.
* * *
THAT ON a side street.
* * *
WHERE IT isn't so bright.
* * *
WE MAY all of us find.
* * *
WHAT WE all of us seek.
* * *
WHEN THE glare of the lights.
* * *
CEASES BLINDING our eyes.

I THANK you.

OH, DEATH, WHERE IS THY STING?

Headline on London dispatch reads: "Drowns Self by Inhaling Beer."

TRY THIS ON YOUR ADDING MACHINE

You walk to beat the Elevated's 10-cent fare. You save—say 20 cents a week day at least. But you wear out shoes faster. Shoes are high. However, you improve your health through exercise. So you sidetrack the doctor and his increased scale of charges. Also, you have splendid appetites. But you eat more. Your wife calls for an increased family budget. You use more time in walking than you did in riding. You might put that time into earning more than you save by walking. Still, you might be spending money for amusement in that same time. It's a tough profit-and-loss sheet to figure out, any way to look at it. But you have the satisfaction, at least, of not having to give up a whole dime merely to "pay-as-you-enter." That's something.

* * *

MAYBE SHE WILL COME TO BOSTON

Wall street brokers are reported as scared of Kissin. Not the kind you think, however. The Kissin they fear is Miss Rita Kissin, examiner for the Treasury Department. She is probing brokers' books now for income tax evasions. She is described, moreover, as a mighty pretty woman, pretty enough for just the name she has.

* * *

COOTIES TOOK PART

Remember the Table Mountain person of whom Bret Hart penned the line: "He was a most sarcastic man, this quiet Mr. Brown." Brother Brown had nothing for sarcasm on Senator Silas D. Reed of Taunton. In opposing the bill for a memorial tablet in the State House for horses and dogs that served in the world war the Bristol County Senator cuttingly suggested tablets to cats, mice "and creeping things" that took part in the conflict.

* * *

KNOCKOUT

Fish Trust vs. Law. Quite a bout. Considerably longer than the Willard-Dempsey bout. But just as decisive in the end. Law swung savagely with its right, so to speak, in form of the State courts. Then landed a haymaker with its left, the Federal courts. And the referee counted ten and then some.

HOHENZOLLERN ENTRIES SCRATCHED

Today France celebrates her equivalent for our July Fourth. Bill Hohenzollern and family had planned to be masters of ceremonies today in Paris, but are unavoidably detained "in Dutch."

GET YOUR IDEAS RIGHT AROUND YOU

If you are an artist in any line of work or accomplishment, and you want to be thought original, don't get the idea that you must travel far and wide to gain material.

Given the proper amount of technical skill, it is the scenes we know best which we can paint best—the experiences which have cut in the deepest which we know well enough to write about.

Human interest, heart interest, is the thing which counts when your purpose is to catch the public.

Are you aiming to interest a few of a class, or are you ambitious to be known generally because you touch the heart strings of humanity?

Now, to touch the soul, one need not be original, but to keep the attention of everybody it is necessary to do and say things in an unusual way which pleases, or at least attracts attention.

A few there are who never do things like others because they don't know, and these are naturally original.

The rest of the human family can do something original by knowing so well what others do and then doing something else.

HEROES OF TODAY NOT HOBOES OF TOMORROW

By Colonel Arthur Woods,
Assistant to the Secretary of War

Prepared for exclusive publication in connection with the Soldiers' Service Bureau of the Hearst Newspapers.

SOMEONE has very aptly said that "The hero of today is not to become the hobo of tomorrow." This expresses exactly the attitude of our office toward the hundreds of thousands of fighting men who have been returning to our shores during the past six months or more.

Immediately after the Civil War the government did not have any well defined policy with regard to assisting the home-coming soldiers, and as a result many of these men having acquired a "gypsy foot," so to speak, became wanderers upon the face of the earth. Those who were crippled went out on the highways and byways, in many instances, playing upon sympathetic persons and making an existence by seeking alms.

Soldiers of Fortune

Some men, of course, were never made to settle down in a home. Today we will find some who will follow the profession of arms or will become soldiers of fortune, never satisfied to remain in one place, but the great majority of our returning men are fed up on that sort of thing. They want to settle down and get back into the old life as quickly as possible. And we must help them do this. We must meet every one of them, no matter how late he comes back, the last just as cordially as the first, no matter how difficult he is to put into a job, and no matter how particular he is as to the kind of a job he has the ambition to get. No matter all these things, we must feel towards him the same kind of duty that one individual feels to another who has done great things for him. We must not get used to him.

A wounded man in the hospital, the other day, who had an empty right sleeve, said rather sadly to one of the welfare workers who was assuring him that he would be taken care of until he was well, "Sure, I suppose that's so today, but after a few months when I get off this uniform, I will simply be a man out of work, with an empty sleeve."

The pity of it. If there is one thing we should not do it is to get used to these men. We want them to feel and to know we are as ready to do as big things for them as they were ready to do when they risked their lives to creep out and pull back into some shell hole the other fellow who was wounded. I want every soldier to understand that this is the spirit in which we are trying to help the returning fighting men. Everyone is ready to help if they can only be shown how.

Welcomed Home

A great many of the former service men have been welcomed home and welcomed back to the old job with perhaps better pay or better opportunities. However, there are many who have come back with an entirely different idea of life. The question which we must try to answer is the one which has arisen because of the new ambitions of these men who are back and who will come back. They have done something that is worth while.

Men do not ordinarily take the lives of their fellow men, and when they do it stirs them pretty deeply. So these men have acquired the habit of doing things out of the ordinary, and as they come back to civil life they are inspired with the purpose and determination of doing things out of the ordinary and we call it ambition. This ambition of the soldier is probably one of the best things about him.

If we endeavored to fit him back in civil life in a place where his ambitions would not be able to be fulfilled, then we should not have lived up to our duty to him. We have got to do something more than simply offer him a job and let it go at that. We have got to keep on the job ourselves until each one of them has been fitted into his particular niche in the scheme of things and when we have accomplished this we will have in a measure done our duty.

This is our message to the home-coming fighting men. We hope that they will take it as an earnest promise that their necessities will be jealously guarded, and their opportunities considered. Our work will not be done until one hundred per cent. of our soldiers and sailors have been fitted into work for which they are best suited and for which their ambitions yearn.

TRACING OIL SHALE BACK THROUGH THE AGES

By Garrett P. Serviss

"What is oil shale? 'A' claims that, in Colorado, it is compacted ooze of a former inland marsh. 'B' claims it is bituminized vegetable matter and organic remains of fossils from prehistoric times, evidence of which he has seen in the mountains near De Beque, Colorado. Is there more than one variety, each of different formation?
H. B. P.
"New York."

OIL SHALE defines itself. It is a soft, laminated or leaflike rock, formed by the effects of pressure and heat from deposits of clay and "rock flour," and containing more or less mineral oil, derived from some of the materials contained in the clay. In many regions, such as Southern California, the oil would appear to have come principally from the decomposition of diatoms, which are single-celled marine plants, microscopic in size, which swarmed in almost incredible numbers in the shallow seas and waters formerly covering the regions where the shales are now found.

In various parts of the world vast deposits of diatom remains exist, sometimes many square miles in area and as much as fifty feet thick. Ehrenberg calculated that a single cubic inch of such rock contained the remains of no less than forty thousand million of these ancient organisms.

But there are many varieties of oil shale, depending for their precise composition upon the locality, the geological age and the circumstances of their deposition. Some of them date back as far as the Devonian period, which was earlier than the "coal age," and during which most of New York State, except the Adirondacks, as well as many of the central States toward the West and Southwest, were covered by sea water. It is from these Devonian deposits that most of the oil and gas of Pennsylvania and West Virginia are derived.

Going Back Further

Even earlier than this, in the Ordovician period, which goes within one step of the very beginning of geological history, oil rocks were formed, and Professor W. J. Miller says: "The great oil and gas field of Ohio and Indiana derives its principal supply from the Ordovician rocks, especially the Trenton limestone."

In the Cretaceous and the Jurassic periods, millions of years later, and long after the "coal age," which term is conventionally limited to the Carboniferous period, deposits of oil shale were extensively formed, and it is possible that the decomposition of the abundant animal organisms of those times (which included the "age of the great reptiles") may have added something to the store of oily material in the clays, although the diatoms and similar minute marine plants continued, through all these ages, to flourish most abundantly in the waters, and probably constituted the principal source from which the oil was formed. In Texas and Louisiana the cretaceous deposits have been the principal source of oil and gas, and they have served a similar purpose in various places in the Western United States.

Again, in the Tertiary, the last of the great geologic periods before the present, oil shales were laid down in the form of clays at the bottom of shallow seas and other expanses of water, and notable among the tertiary deposits furnishing large quantities of oil are those of Southern California, although there oil is also obtained from jurassic rocks.

Prehistoric Living Things

Now if there had been no living things on the earth during all those aeons of slow progress in the shaping of the exterior of the planet's crust, there would have been, as far as we can see, no oil and no gas in the rocks for civilized man to discover and utilize. Nearly all of these bituminous products, according to the best knowledge now available, are due to the decomposition of animal and vegetable organisms, most if not all of which lived in the water. The older theory of the inorganic origin of the rock oils and gasses seems to have been practically driven out of the field.

But think of the time required for the manufacture of the oil in the rocks and for the storing of it in localities where it could be useful to intelligent beings dwelling on the earth's surface.
